The Importance of Psychology

Psychology has played a big part in the making of successful men and women right down the ages, but it is only in our time that it has become an object for study. To-day it is an exact science of inestimable value to all those who avail themselves of its help.

May we invite you to meet Mrs. Cromwell Bush, the famous Psychologist, who is available on our premises.

Each year over 5,000 people consult her—probably she can help you. She will find out your latent abilities and tendencies and probably prevent you becoming a “square peg in a round hole” in later life.

Whatever your problems—moral, physical or mental—bring them to Mrs. Bush for solution.

Make an appointment now, remember it is made by number, and no one—not even Mrs. Bush—knows who you are or where you come from.

Consultations are of any length at 2/6d. per 15 minutes, but we suggest not less than half an hour for a successful reading.

THE CHRONICLE.

The School year 1933-34 has been a sad one in that we have lost three good friends. Mr. Gardner was for twenty-one years our Chairman, and although he had recently retired from the Chairmanship, he remained a Governor of the School. We owe much to his kindly and unfailing help at all times. Mr. Sneyd Kynnersley's interest in, and wide knowledge of, educational matters is well-known. Although the Arch-deacon of Chester has only been officially connected with the school for a comparatively short time, he had for many years been a sympathetic and helpful friend.

When the School re-opened in September we welcomed two new members of the staff, Miss Sybil Trubshaw, an old Queen's School girl whom we are very pleased to have with us again, and Miss Baxter. Miss Trubshaw has taken Miss Ruffell's place as History mistress, and Miss Baxter has replaced Miss Simpson as Classics mistress.

The first outstanding event of the Autumn Term was a performance of "Twelfth Night," given at the School, on the afternoon of October the 9th, by the Osiris Players. Interest was added to the afternoon by the fact that one of the players, Peggy Gowings, is an Old Queen's School girl.

Our Prize Day was Tuesday, October 31st. Our thanks were given to the Lord Bishop of Chester, who spared time out of his very busy life to come and take part in our Cathedral service, to the Dean for once again arranging the service, to Mr. Boyle and the choir, and to all who gave us their help. The sermon was preached by the Rev. A. J. Toyne, Vicar of St. Philip's, Aldrington, Hove. As it was the eve of All Saints' Day, he took as his text, "Called to be Saints." At the Prize Distribution in the afternoon the Chair was taken by Mrs. H. F. Brown, and the prizes were given away by Mr. E. Peter Jones. As he is a Governor of the School we hope to have him with us on many other occasions.

On Monday, November 20th, Mrs. Downer paid a morning visit to the School and gave us a short talk about the work of the League of Nations Union.

On Saturday, November 25th, a Bazaar was held at the School, and the proceeds were paid into our School Fund, the balance sheet of which is always published in "Have Mynde." The graciousness with which Lady Grey Egerton first accepted our invitation to come and open the bazaar, was characteristic of her during the entire afternoon. She visited all our stalls and all our competitions, and was unfailingly generous, patient and kindly. Considering the difficulties of the times we were more than satisfied with the financial result of our Sale.

On January 23rd, we sent a party of senior girls to a League of Nations Union Meeting arranged for the Chester Schools in the Town Hall. The speaker was Mr. Walton Starkey.

On Wednesday, February 14th, Mrs. Diana Watts paid us her third visit, and gave us a lecture on Greek, Chinese, and Hindu sculpture. She illustrated her lecture by showing us a collection of wonderful photographs, all of which she had taken herself.

Miss Gee had planned to take a party of sixth form girls for a walking tour in the Lake District during a part of the Easter holidays. Unfortunately she was ill and so not able to go. She had, however, made such thorough arrangements that it was possible for the girls to carry out the tour by themselves. They are to be congratulated on having done this so successfully.

On Wednesday, June 13th, Mr. Hesketh Hubbard gave us a most interesting lecture on "Twelve Hundred Years of English Art." We had to thank the Chester Education Committee for allowing us the use of the Lecture Room at the Grosvenor Museum, so that we were able to enjoy the excellent lantern slides with which Mr. Hubbard illustrated his lecture.

As usual during the Summer Term we are enjoying Botany walks, Geographical and Historical expeditions, picnics for the boarders, etc.

Cricket is being played under difficulties as we are not able to use the centre of our field. The grass suffered last year, owing to constant use during a season of record lack of rain and we are now having to give it a rest. We are most grateful to Mr. Baty, and the King's School, for allowing us to use their field on Friday afternoons.

M. T. Nedham.

IN MEMORIAM.

Edwin Gardner.

With the passing of Mr. Gardner, the Queen's School has lost a sincere friend of many years' standing. Mr. Gardner was elected Chairman of the Governing Body in succession to Sir Horatio Lloyd in 1913.

His first duty was to receive Katharine, Duchess of Westminster, on the occasion of the opening of the Hastings Wing, with its new laboratory and science-room. It was a difficult and indeed, critical time for the School which had to be brought into line with the requirements of a more modern and wider curriculum. Mr. Gardner ever proved himself a wise and sympathetic Chairman, and an enthusiast for the education of girls.

He never grudged time. He was readily accessible to all concerned in or with the School, lending courteous attention to any matter or person however insignificant. On Prize Days he was always in the Chair. Only when his health completely failed did he relinquish his task. The sympathy of the School went out to his family.

Archdeacon Paige Cox.

Among the very many of Chester's institutions which have, through the death of Archdeacon Paige Cox, lost an old and valued friend, is the Queen's School. The Archdeacon was one of its Governors, pre-eminent in the regularity of his attendance at their meetings and always helpful with his wise and experienced advice and suggestions. Always a keen educationalist, his sympathy with and understanding of the young seemed to grow as with him years advanced. He took a very special interest and part in the School's Annual Service in the Cathedral and made a point, when possible, of being one of the clergy at it. The School will long retain him in its grateful memory.

Edmund Sneyd Kynnersley.

Mr. Sneyd Kynnersley, an important figure in Chester, who died last year, was a Governor of the Queen's School for nearly a quarter of a century—from 1907 to 1931.

Mr. Kynnersley came to Chester in 1903 as His Majesty's Inspector of Schools, and was made a Governor of the Queen's School four years later, when he became a City Councillor and member of the Chester Education Committee.

Mr. Kynnersley was an amusing companion. He had nous, a pretty wit and a kindly heart. He did not take himself over seriously; but his qualities made him attractive to those who knew him. For the learning secured chiefly for show, or for gain, he had little use, and he could be engagingly frank about it—on occasion. His own attainments were at the service of others. Many will miss him.

Joan D. Williams.

Joan Williams, aged fourteen, a pupil of the Queen's School, died on November the 9th, 1933, as the result of a road accident.

GAMES, 1933-34.

Tennis, 1st VI.

Anthea Nelson (Captain)—A very steady and reliable player. Net-play was very good and she had some nice drives. Should try to vary her strokes and make more use of the side lines.

(V.D.W.)

Beryl Williams.—Individually her shots were good, especially her cross-court drive; but she was not reliable enough in a match, and was slow on her feet. She must have more determination.

Sylvia Davidson.—With Connie Baxter as partner she won most of her matches during the season. Her net-play was good and she had a strong serve. Her backhand drive was weak.

Connie Baxter.—A very useful member of the team because she was so full of determination although her shots were not so strong as those of most of the team. Her net-play was good, and back and forehand drives equally reliable.

Faith Power.—A most promising member of the team. Her drives were powerful and had good length, but she was rather slow to move.

Josephine Duckworth.—A steady player even in a losing game; but she must try not to "cut" her backhand drives and to be much quicker on her feet.

A. M. Nelson (Tennis Captain).

Anthea Nelson, Sylvia Davidson and Connie Baxter gained their colours.

The House Cup was won by Westminster.

Cricket, 1st XI.

Constance Baxter (Captain).—A good all round player. Her batting and fielding were particularly good.

Dorothy Wilson.—A very keen player. Batted carefully and in good style.

Betty Harpur.—A very good fielder. Batting was good and she had a good length in bowling.

Gwynneth Austin.—Fielding was particularly good and batting improved towards the end of the season.

Isabel Imison.—Quite a good bat but was rather inclined to treat all bowling in the same manner.

Margaret Leach.—A good bowler. Batting was not so good but improved with practice.

Barbara Sabine.—An alert fielder and a promising bat.

Kathleen Dobie.—Very quick in the field but batting needs practice.

Gwendy Owen.—A useful player whose batting and fielding were good.

Christine Stalker.—Batting lacked style and confidence, but fielding was quite good.

Anthea Nelson.—A very good wicket-keeper and quite a good bat. Should not try to make runs off all bowling.

Mary Stone.—A good bowler and fielder. Had very nice batting style and although she played carefully she was not afraid to hit out.

Constance Baxter, Mary Stone, Dorothy Wilson, Betty Harpur and Isabel Imison gained their colours.

The House Cup was won by Sandford.

V. D. W.

Hockey, 1st XI.

Goal: Olga Smith.—An erratic player; must try to be quicker on her feet and not rely so much on her stick.

Right Back: Ruth Speight (Captain).—Good. A most useful member of the team. Had a very sound idea of defence play and gave good passes to the forwards; was untiring in her efforts both in defence and attack.

Left Back: Kathleen Dobie.—A very reliable player. Her game was always steady and she worked very well with her fellow Back. Tackling and anticipation were particularly good.

Right Half: Anthea Nelson.—Good; played a very sound game and was most persistent in tackling. Backed up very well outside the circle.

Centre Half: Christine Stalker.—Good tackling and intercepting spoilt by indecisive clearing.

Left Half: Joyce Lowe.—A very energetic new member of the team. Unfortunately her lack of speed prevented her from backing up her forwards as much as she should have done.

Right Wing: Nancy Varley.—Quite good. Play improved very much towards the end of the season.

Right Inner: Margaret Mawer.—A promising player. Must learn to receive passes and get away with the ball quickly, and tackle back more persistently.

Centre: Gwendy Owen.—Very good. Played a good game with the inside forwards. Should use more long forward passes to the wings. Shooting and play in the circle were very good.

Left Inner: Joan Corbett.—Good. Passes to the right were very good; was always ready to rush in the circle.

Left Wing: Barbara Sabine.—Has made a very promising start as an attack player. Ball control improved and when she has learned how to gain possession of the ball without roughness she will make a really useful Left Wing.

Ruth Speight, Kathleen Dobie, Anthea Nelson and Gwendy Owen gained their colours.

The Senior House Cup was won by Hastings.

V. D. W.

Hockey, 2nd XI.

Goal: B. Wilson.—Had a very good eye, and stopped the ball well, but was slow in clearing. Must learn to keep her balance when kicking the ball.

Right Back: G. Austin (Captain).—A good player who was always ready to back up her half and fellow back.

Left Back: M. Leach.—A player new to defence who worked very hard, but who has yet to learn how to give helpful passes to her forwards.

Right Half: J. Hardy.—Marked and intercepted well, but was far too slow in clearing.

Centre Half: M. Davies.—Marked and intercepted very well; must remember to mark even more closely in the circle.

Left Half: F. Leach.—Marked her wing quite well, but has not yet learnt to interchange quickly.

Right Wing: M. Draut.—An energetic player whose game should improve with more match experience.

Right Inner: A. Dain.—A player who had speed and a powerful drive, but whose game was spoilt by careless passing, and inability to receive passes and continue her run.

Centre: J. Boulton.—Must learn to control the ball when it is passed to her. Play was spoilt by hitting blindly ahead.

Left Inner: M. Kay.—Play would be improved by better ball control and more persistence.

Left Wing: D. Meacock.—Quite good. Should try to vary her tactics when taking the ball down the wing.

Ruth Speight (Hockey Captain).

Lacrosse, 1st XII.

Goal: Margaret Leach.—Fairly good. Played with increasing confidence as the season advanced.

Point: Kathleen Dobie.—Marked 1st Home very closely and intercepted well. Altogether she was a most reliable player.

Cover Point: Christine Stalker.—Made steady improvement during the term. Must not hover between two opponents as this spoils the interchanging of the rest of the defence.

Third Man: Ruth Speight.—Played a very good game throughout the season. Her marking, sense of anticipation and stickwork were excellent. In defence she was untiring and set a very fine example to the rest of the team.

Right Defence: Blanche Perry.—A very promising player who has speed and a good idea of the tactics of the game. With improved stickwork and a little more persistence in tackling she should do well.

Left Defence: Joyce Lowe.—Worked tremendously hard. Stickwork could have been better, particularly catching.

Centre: Gwendy Owen.—Her speed was a great asset to the team. Stickwork and shooting were very good.

Right Attack: Barbara Sabine.—Will make a good attack player when catching is more certain. At the moment her defence play is better than attack probably because she is new to the tactics of the latter.

Left Attack: Joan Corbett.—A somewhat erratic player. She worked hard but was very slow to catch the ball and get away with it.

Third Home: Anthea Nelson.—Very good; had good stickwork and combined well with the other attacks.

Second Home: Margaret Mawer.—Worked very hard, but was not sufficiently reliable. Did not use the other attacks to advantage.

First Home: Faith Power.—Stickwork and tactics improved rapidly until by the end of the season she was a most useful member of the team.

Gwendy Owen gained her colours.

The House Cup was won by Hastings.

THE GREAT INDIAN EARTHQUAKE.

[The writer of the following article was living in Patna in the Province of Bihar at the time of the earthquake].

On the afternoon of Monday, January the 15th, at 2-15, the Province of Bihar was rent from end to end by the greatest earthquake India has suffered during the last hundred years. Earthquakes causing a slight tremor of the ground, a waving to and fro of trees, a crack in a mud hut, are not uncommon, but an earthquake which shattered whole streets of houses, which made thousands of people homeless and destroyed their crops, was something outside the experience of everyone, and caused the utmost consternation, grief and fear. The shock lasted for five minutes, time enough to make everyone wonder if it were ever going to stop and the earth keep still again.

Generally, before a slight earthquake, there is a curious, heavy, still feeling in the air, which is called earthquake weather, but before the great earthquake there was no warning. Everyone was carrying on as usual, buying and selling in the bazaar, cultivating in the fields, travelling on the roads, or taking an afternoon siesta, when suddenly there was a loud rumbling sound, the houses rocked and crashed, the earth split in great cracks, and in five minutes damage had been done that can only be repaired by months, in some cases years, of patient work.

The English Church in Patna looked as though it had been shelled, and the pinnacles on the tower had fallen both ways, to north and south, showing how violent the side to side motion must have been. The railway lines were twisted and turned, so that no train could pass over them for days; the crops north of the Ganges were submerged by the water which spouted from the ground; and many of the sugar factories, all ready for crushing the sugar cane, were so much damaged that it was feared that the sugar harvest would be lost. A number of small mills, that could be worked by bullock-power, were hastily constructed to cope with the ripe sugar cane, and in this way many small-holders were able to make their profit, or at least to cut their loss.

The material lost must be enormous, whatever measures are taken to lessen it, but there seems to be a splendid feeling of co-operation and sympathy which might be counted as gain. The Viceroy's fund in India, the Lord Mayor's fund in England, are evidence of a spirit of goodwill, which must bring home to the poor cultivator, who has suffered loss, the fact that the British Government and the British people are ready to help in this dreadful time of need.

THE LECTURE.

On Wednesday, the 13th June, the whole School assembled at the Museum to listen to a lecture about pictures. We were shown lantern slides of various sketches, paintings, tapestries, and plates that had been done in the last twelve hundred years. The lecturer said that when printing started the artists lost their chance.

There are different kinds of artists. A "romantic" artist paints a tree so that you can see what kind of a tree it is. Another kind of artist paints a tree just as a tree, and you can't see what kind of a tree it is.

An artist insisted on a lady lying fully dressed in a bath for him to paint her. (Ophelia, by Millais, Ed.) King Henry IIX (it is said) had artists to paint all the pretty ladies so that when he wanted a new wife he only had to go to his picture gallery.

Queen Elizabeth was very fond of her dresses and when she died she had 3,000 dresses in her wardrobe. The lecturer said he was once staying at an historic place (St James's Palace, Ed.) and he said to a girl who was showing him her sketches, "I expect you are good at history, living in such a historic place." "Oh, yes," she answered quite casually, "a king was born in Mummy's bedroom, and King Charles I walked out at our back door to be executed."

An artist once was arrested. He told them he was an English artist but they would not believe him until he had painted the portraits of all the people who arrested him. (At the painting of Calais Gate, by Hogarth, Ed.)

People who were well-off, if they wished to become men, went on a world tour and had the places they had been to painted, as proof that they had been there. People who were not so well off either had an artist to instruct them so that they could paint the places themselves, or had an artist to instruct one of their many daughters so that she could come with them and paint the places.

A WALKING TOUR IN THE LAKE DISTRICT.

We were among the mountains at last, though feeling somewhat doubtful about our route as the only experienced member of the party was unable to be with us; however, we had not been totally disappointed in our holiday as Miss Nedham very kindly gave us permission to go alone. On the train we made the most of what we thought would be our last good meal, and the journey soon passed.

When we arrived at Keswick, in warm sunshine, we shouldered our packs somewhat self-consciously, amongst all those seemingly experienced hikers, and set off to walk along Derwent Water to Grange in Borrowdale. For the first day we were very keen to notice all the "interesting natural phenomena," and in the evening as we wearily trudged into the hostel we were all ready for a good meal, even if it were Irish stew, and so to bed or palliasses, as the case might be. On the first night we lay for a time listening to the talk of tarns, peaks, lakes and gills, and felt what a lot we had to see and learn, and how much easier it would have been had Miss Gee been with us.

In the morning we woke up to find that one meal, and one night on a lumpy bed had been too much for one of our party. She went home. But the other three were undaunted at the thought of seven more days hiking; hostels are not so bad as all that!

Next day took us through the Honister Pass to Buttermere, and that evening as we climbed over Cat Bells' we felt that twenty miles over hill and dale was quite a good beginning. On the following day we experienced real wintry conditions; a mist creeping up behind us over Esk House developed into a snow-storm, and had it not been for the guidance of two other members of the Youth Hostels, we should never have had the thrilling experience of "skiing" down Rossett Gill into the sunny Langdale Valley.

The model hostel at Grasmere rose above all expectations, and we were very loath to leave it three days later. We had climbed Helvellyn, sometimes up to our knees in snow, and from the top had had a glorious view of six lakes and several tarns dotted amongst snow-capped peaks.

Copper Mine's House at the foot of Conistone Old Man was our next port of call. We spent one day climbing the Old Man in snow, with no footpath to follow, but when we arrived in the valley again it was warm and sunny as usual. Although the weather had been kind to us during the rest of the tour a thunderstorm could not resist greeting us at Kendal. Nevertheless we got safely on the train and were soon speeding back to Chester and home, making all sorts of plans for other walking tours in England and abroad!

MY OAK TREE.

Once upon a time when I was out for a walk I picked up an acorn and brought it home. As soon as I reached home I planted it in the garden and I wondered what would happen to it. After a long time a little shoot came above the ground and I was very pleased to see that my acorn had begun to grow. Soon it grew quite big and leaves began to sprout, and after a while there were quite a lot of green leaves with wavy edges, so that it looked like a real oak tree, only very small.

I am wondering whether next year it will have grown an acorn of its own.

MY GRANNY'S PET ROOK.

In my Granny's garden there are tall beech trees in which, when I was a little baby, several rooks came and built their nests of twigs in the topmost branches. In April there was a big storm and it blew most of the rooks' nests down and some of the babies were killed. One of the baby ones was not killed, only injured, so my Granny took it into the house and looked after it.

My granny feeds it on bread, milk, butter and hot water mixed. Sometimes before I have my breakfast I go to my granny's and feed the rook.

WET WEATHER.

Patter, patter, patter,
Listen to the rain
Making such a clatter
On the window pane.
The angry sparrows scatter
They fuss and scold and chatter;
Patter, patter, patter
It's worse and worse again.

THE SNAIL.

Whenever the sun is dark and wet,
Whenever the water's dry,
All night long and with deep regret,
A Snail goes hopping by.
Late in the day when the stars
will play,
Why does he lollop and lollop
away?

Whenever the night is sunny and bright,
And enemies fierce agree
The Snail on the highway dead
with fright,
Lolloping on goes he,
In a rakish hat that is all askew,
Over the world three times he flew.

MY RIDE.

One day as I was riding along on my grey pony I came upon a trail of white feathers, and here and there a spot of blood. I followed the trail down the fields to a large wood. As I approached it, I saw a very pretty scene. There was an old vixen playing with her chubby, bear-like, cubs. They were rolling their mother over in the moss and fern, and pretending to bite her. Suddenly the vixen stopped playing, and jumped up looking very alert. She had seen me watching her, and knew that danger might be near her cubs. She gave a loud snarl, and calling to her cubs rushed away.

When they had gone I turned my pony to follow the trail again. It led round to the back of the wood, and as I drew nearer the trees, I could see the vixen again. She must have thought that I would not come to this side of the wood to look for her. She and her cubs were eating the remains of a fat hen. Now I knew why the trail had been there. As I watched, two of the cubs had a mock fight, and both ended upside down in a huge clump of ferns. So I left them to go on with their lunch.

A VISIT TO THE UPTON ZOO.

One day we all went to the Upton Zoo. Two bears were the first things we saw as we entered the stable yard where parrots were screaming and small monkeys were asking for nuts by putting their hands through the bars of their cages. There was one male and one female bear who were eating biscuits and nuts. Some of the monkeys were very gentle as they took the nuts from us, but if we teased them they would grab at our fingers and squeeze them very tightly. Mary, the two-year-old Chimpanzee, had many admirers, but the other monkeys did not seem jealous. Mary has quite a large swing in her cage which she is very fond of. While we were watching, my sister bent over the rail too far and Mary snatched her beret. Then there was great excitement. Mary tried the beret on, examined the name-tape and ran about wildly. She would not give it back to anyone.

Half an hour later we went back to see if Mary still had the beret, and just as we got there, a little boy grabbed it from her. She was very angry and stamped and screamed as loudly as she could. Then she sat down and cried, and she was still crying when we left her.

THE WOODPECKER.

It was an August morning. The sun was shining and there was but a slight wind when suddenly into sight came a beautiful green and red bird. It was a Woodpecker. "Oh! but how lovely!" I said to myself, for I had never seen one before. He gave a light laugh, landed on the tree opposite my window and began pecking away into the ivy. I went to the top of the stairs and called for my father and mother to come up. At last they came up with my brother. I warned them to walk quietly. They peeped through the window and saw the lovely sight. Suddenly the Woodpecker lifted up his beak and began to sing as though he was very pleased with himself, "Haw haw, haw haw, haw haw haw haw." It was very funny; we nearly laughed ourselves; but if we had done so, the Woodpecker would most certainly have flown away. We could not see much of his body at that moment, although he was a fair-sized bird, because he was intent upon getting something out of the ivy. We were holding our breath; the tension was great; none of us dared go for a camera. Suddenly he looked round. We bobbed out of sight. He was tugging and pulling at the ivy. At last something came out. He gave a high-pitched laugh and flew away among the trees.

THE 'ENGINE' SPEAKS.

I am an engine, a large, black, thundering, puffing express which tears along the shining rails at break-neck speed; but enough of this, all that is over for the day and I am in a large draughty shed after my day's work, and oh, what a busy day it has been for me! Shall I tell you about it? Very well then.

As soon as the night clouds had rolled away, I heard a grating of the rusty bolts and locks, and in came my driver, whistling a tune. I was cleaned down and then given my breakfast, or as you would say, I was stoked up with coal. He then called the fireman, and they both leapt in, and then it was that I really woke up! I grunted, snorted, shook myself, and began slowly to move out of my shed. I ran along a little way, until I came to my carriages, where they were coupled up and cleaned down. Then I started off again, puffing and grunting to the great station, where porters were already busy with milk churns, mail bags and poultry. Busy city workers ran about everywhere, climbing into my carriages, banging their long-suffering doors and shouting for papers. The whistle blew, the flag waved, I jolted and jostled, puffed and snorted, and then was off. Gathering speed every minute, I dashed past the little suburban houses, and at last came out into the open country, past small villages, lonely farms, running brooks, wooded hills, cattle and fields where happy children played in the hay.

At last the little suburban houses appeared again, the large chimneys belching forth black smoke, gasometers, and all the old town sights that I am used to. Then I tore into the station, slowed up, and came to a standstill, puffing and panting. There was the usual clanging, banging, shouting, puffing and whistling. With a snort and a shake, I was off again. At last I arrived at my destination, Birmingham, where I puffed slowly into my shed. The doors were bolted, my driver was gone, and I was left to my lonely thoughts.

A THUNDERSTORM.

It was three o'clock on a hot, sultry afternoon when I was startled by a sharp flash of lightning. The storm which had threatened all day had broken.

Leaving my book I called the others, and we hurried round shutting all the windows. The rain had not yet started and we had a clear view of the lightning. Its fantastic patterns flamed out against the jet black sky, for the day was as dark as night.

As we were watching I saw a sight I shall never forget. A jagged streak of lightning ran through the trees, and one after another they crashed down shaking the earth. The lightning passed across the field and buried itself in the river, turning it to silver for a moment. The dry grass was smouldering; the moving air fanned it into a blaze; the downpour came. There was a sharp hiss as it hit the flames. Then the thick, driving rain blotted out everything.

Occasional flashes still lit up the field; then the thunder rolled away into silence. Gradually the storm passed, and the copse, once a lovely, shady place, was just a heap of charred, soaked wood and grass.

DAWN.

Pale saffron streaks were showing through the dark.
The stars had ceased to twinkle, and the moon
Had faded out of sight. The streaks grew wider
And the erstwhile night-clouds fled away.
The trees looked real, instead of ghostly forms,
Which through the night had waved their leafy arms.

But now the sun peeps out from 'neath the clouds;
The flowers lift their heads to drink the warmth.
A lark soars upward, singing to the sky;
A sparrow chirrup and the world awakes.

TEDDY.

Resplendent in his tightly-fitting green suit, Teddy used to sit by my side at breakfast. He behaved quite well, except that he always whispered in my ear: "Is it marmalade or honey in the pot?"

After this, we would go for a walk together. He was a comfy person to hold, was Teddy; his ears used to tickle my chin. We used to do all kinds of things while we were out; I used to tell him stories and we would look for funny faces in the clouds; if it had been raining we used to jump over the puddles, and I often had to scold Teddy most severely if we did not quite reach the other side. It was very exciting to walk along a pavement, because if we had ever trodden on a line, a hungry lion would have jumped out upon us and eaten us up. I always used to think it was a bear, till Teddy told me that he was sure it could not be, because he was one himself and knew what it felt like.

In the afternoon, I was often taken out to see some friends; if it was sunny, we used to play in the garden. If Teddy was not interested in the games, I would take him to another part of the garden and make him a daisy-chain, while he sat propped up against a stone watching me with a pleased but glassy stare.

Evening and bed-time came all too soon. On the way homewards, Teddy and I would agree that we did not feel in the least sleepy; we could go on playing for hours; but, at long last, I would find myself in bed. Perhaps I was sleepy, after all; and Teddy was very cuddly.

AFTER THE STORM.

The storm-clouds pass away, broken and spent and grey;
And all the silver glory of the hidden sun
Pours forth through glistening, watery air.
Filling the earth with light, with a radiancy so bright,
That tree-trunks weep, and shine where tiny rivers run,
And once again the earth is fresh and fair.

Though bowed by heavy rain, the bruised flowers rise again,
And lift their wet heads to the healing warmth and light,
To soothe the anxious, zooming bees.
And, never silent long, the thrush begins his song,
An anthem full of ripples, trilling from the height,
From where he sways amidst the dripping trees.

I marvelled when I thought of what the storm had brought,
 The crashing, rumbling thunder, the lightning, rain and hail;
 And that it all could pass away,
 Forgotten like a shower, by every fragile flower,
 Without leaving in its wake a stricken, dying trail,
 To fill the woodland people with dismay.

* * * *

But as the wood I neared, I saw what I had feared,
 For, stretched upon the earth, there lay a mighty pine.
 A king of trees it once had stood.
 A sentinel to all, so strong and straight and tall
 But now a tangled mass of branches, then so fine
 They used to form a roof above the wood.

O Thorn and Ash and Oak, O all ye woodland folk,
 Be still and mourn your loss with lowly bended head.
 Why should the strong be slain, though weaker ones remain?
 With silent grief attend the passing of your dead.

Margaret E. Leach (Form V Upper).

A VISION OF THE END OF THE WORLD.

All Nature's pent-up forces, unrestrained,
 Leapt at our tiny, unprotected earth.
 O Love Divine, hast thou alone remained?
 Or Thou and the supporting Hope of a re-birth?
 Bright, eager fire, with all-consuming tongue
 Licks the last remains of Adam's seed.
 O will the Almighty Power be long
 To save us by His Word and Deed?
 The awful Trump to rouse the dead
 Has sounded; and a ghastly throng
 To the Judgement Place is led,
 Bright angels usher them along.
 Now God Almighty on His awful Throne
 Presides o'er all this chaos with a calm,
 Thrilling smile: and a fearful groan
 Rises from the stricken multitude.
 O Thou! whose Doctrine is of endless Love,
 Plead for our souls, most Holy Dove.
 For Thou alone hast power to save—
 I woke, and then my trembling soul
 Was filled with taste of Love Divine.
 O Beings! ere more time shall roll
 Taste the flavour of that wine.
 Its help alone can tide you o'er the end,
 And cause that stern, Just Power to unbend.

It is of interest to note that K. Curlett, Woman Central Office Agent for the Wessex Area, has been appointed Assistant to the Speakers' Department at Conservative headquarters.

Doreen (Britton) Power continues to send interesting experiences from the Sudan. The latest—perhaps more thrilling than agreeable—is a Dust Storm. "It appeared about 6 in the afternoon. It had been unusually sticky and the clouds had gathered, so we suspected a storm, either rain or sand. About 6 o'clock we saw it was sand. The cloud was about 30 miles away. It was about 3,000ft. high, 5 miles wide, and travelled at 60 miles an hour. I stood up on the roof watching while the boys (servants) were shutting the house and packing things up. We were in a line with the centre of the storm and as it approached, the air was very still, and the people, cars and buses were scurrying in all directions for home or shelter. In the centre of this colossal cloud of dust there seemed to be a cone of sand that did not change, and on either side it billowed out and rushed on, a dark brown colour streaked with purple. At 6-30 it was on us. It curled all round us and over us, first a breath of air, then a roar of wind. The trees bent, things rattled—and all was blotted out. As it grew darker it grew redder and blacker; for two hours it was pretty thick. The cook produced dinner about 8-30 when we were able to open some doors and remove the sand from a few chairs and the table . . . At 10 p.m. we went to bed under a clear sky and the air was cool and bracing."

The Old Girls' French Club met regularly on alternate Tuesdays during the Autumn and Spring Terms. The original members are very faithful, but new ones would be welcomed. The Old Girls' Gymnastic Club met on Monday evenings. In the Autumn Term a good number profited by Miss Wilcockson's instruction, but the attendance rather fell off during the Spring Term.

Note.—It is more than possible that many Old Girls have had during the year, experiences of work or travel well worth recording but of which the Honorary Secretary is unaware. She takes this opportunity of urging such Old Girls to let her have anything that would be of interest to the members of the Association.

THE LOUIE GLASCODINE MEMORIAL.

The Committee appointed at the General Meeting of the Old Girls' Association met with a satisfactory response to the appeal they sent out in a circular letter. By the end of the year the sum of £39 had been subscribed. This was invested in the name of the Headmistress of the Queen's School in 3½ per cent War Stock, and the interest is to be used to provide an annual prize (or prizes) in the school to be known as the Louie Glascodine Memorial Prize.

Below is a list of the subscribers.

A LETTER FROM BEDFORD PHYSICAL TRAINING COLLEGE.

B.P.T.C.,

June 19th.

Dear School,

It seems incredible that my days of being a "Junior" here are nearly over. Some feel relieved, and yet being a "Second Year" student is not really as thrilling as being a Junior.

In one year from leaving School we absorb numerous unheard of subjects such as Myology, Pathology, Histology, Anatomy and Swedish Remedials. Some of these subjects are not half as exciting as working out how long it takes one train to pass through a station, the station being so long and the train going so fast. We work out how long it will take a piece of meat to pass down the oesophagus so long. So don't consider your Arithmetic Home Work as too boring.

Of course there are the more exciting subjects such as Games, Gymnastics, Dancing, and for the majority of people, Swimming. I, myself, have not as yet found any joy in jumping head-first into water at 60°F. and then being expected to dive for a brick at the bottom. I often wonder if I will heave a sigh of relief when I do get it, and then someone will have the excitement of diving for a real body.

Perhaps I may now offer a little advice to anyone who thinks of coming to B.P.T.C.

1. Practise changing shoes and stockings at least twenty times a day.
2. Stretch your ham-strings so that you can touch your toes with the greatest of ease.
3. Practise jumping into cold water with a cheerful face.
4. Make up your mind that being a Junior at B.P.T.C. is one of the most thrilling and happy experiences.

And it will be.

I should like to thank the School very much for giving me so many opportunities to practise teaching and coaching, without which I should have felt very inexperienced in my First Year.

Connie Baxter.
