THE CHRONICLE.

The chief event of the School session has been the Celebration of our Diamond Jubilee, and we offer our grateful thanks to the kind friends who shared in our rejoicings and who helped to make the occasion a happy one for us all.

After the summer holidays, the School re-opened on Wednesday, September 15th, 1937. It is encouraging that our numbers in this, our Jubilee year, are higher than they have ever been, and that we can, therefore, feel that our recent extensions to the School building have been justified. We have now 248 girls in the main School, and 67 girls and boys in the preparatory department at Stanley Place. We still have many needs, perhaps the most outstanding being a gymnasium and a second playing field.

On Saturday, October 2nd, girls from Form VI had the privilege of attending the Service in the Cathedral when Bishop Norman Tubbs was installed as Dean of Chester.

Our Prize-Giving was held on Wednesday, November 3rd. The Dean again allowed us to have our Cathedral Service in the morning, and the sermon was preached by Mr. Okell, the Rector of Malpas. We had the pleasure of welcoming Miss Spurling back to Chester, and I think she enjoyed giving away the Prizes almost as much as we enjoyed having her with us.

On Thursday, November 11th, a party of senior girls went to the Royalty Theatre in Chester to see a performance of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," given by the French players, Les Comédiens de Paris.

On Thursday, November 24th, Herr Brann and his Marionettes gave a performance of "Faust" in the Refectory. We joined with the other Chester Secondary Schools in attending this clever production, and we were grateful to Mr. Baty and the King's School for all the trouble they had taken in making the arrangements.

On Friday, November 25th, the Staff of the Queen's School invited the members of the Old Girls' Association to an evening party. The mistresses had arranged a series of amusing and varied competitions, and after supper we all joined in community singing under the efficient leadership of Miss Whittam.

We were well entertained on the last morning of the Autumn Term by the performance of three short plays, given by the School Dramatic Society.

The congratulations and good wishes of the mistresses and girls were given to Miss Petters Hughes on her marriage shortly after Christmas. We welcomed her back in the Spring as Mrs. Hird Jones.

At the end of the Autumn Term we said good-bye to Miss Reid, who was returning to South Africa after her year at the Queen's School. We greatly enjoyed having her with us, and through "Have Mynde" we send her greetings and good wishes.

We were glad to have Miss Trubshaw back at the Queen's School after her year in Miss Reid's place at the Kimberley High School. She missed the first three weeks of the Spring Term, and, during that time, her place was taken by Miss Senior, who had spent the last four years in the Girls' School at Jerusalem. It was interesting hearing of her experiences, and she gave a delightful talk to the senior girls about Palestine. She illustrated this with wonderful pictures of the country and the people.

On January 25th, a party of girls went to see a film on India at the Refectory.

On Wednesday, February 9th, Mrs. Wise paid us her second visit, and again gave us much interesting information about careers for girls. She spoke to the senior girls in the morning and to parents in the evening. We were grateful to Mrs. Brown for coming and taking the chair at the parents' meeting.

During February, the film 'Victoria the Great' was shown at the Odeon cinema, and large groups of girls from all parts of the School were taken to see it.

On Thursday, February 17th, Miss Morris, Miss Gee, Miss Hicks and the Sixth Form girls went to Kelsall, by kind invitation of Mr. Hardy, to see his model dairy farm of Guernsey pedigree cattle. The subject of dairy farming was one of special interest to the girls at that time, as they were preparing papers on "Milk in its various aspects." All the members of the party much appreciated the thorough arrangements made for their visit, and greatly enjoyed Mrs. Hardy's generous hospitality.

The Secondary Schools section of the Chester Musical Festival took place on Saturday, March 12th, the adjudicator being Mr. Cuthbert Kelly, leader of the New English Singers. For the first time, the Festival was held in the Town Hall, and nine Schools took part in it. The success of the afternoon was largely due to the Mayor's generosity in allowing us the use of the Assembly Room and providing the large number of entrants with an excellent tea.

On March 13th, Miss Morris, Miss Gee and Miss Dickie and some of the girls from Form V Lower enjoyed the unusual experience of being taken down a coal mine at Llay. Our very special thanks were due to Mr. and Mrs. Evans of Llay for arranging this visit and for their kind hospitality, and to Mr. Davies, the chief surveyor, for his help.

During the Spring Term, the Dean paid many visits to the School for the preparation of our Confirmation candidates, which he spared time out of his busy life to undertake. The Confirmation was held by the Bishop of Chester in the Cathedral on Friday, March 18th.

An Inter-Form Gymnastics Competition was held on Monday, April 4th, and Miss Roper was good enough to come over from Liverpool to act as judge. Her kindly criticisms of the work throughout the School were most helpful. The Cup was awarded to Form VI.

In the Easter holidays, from April 25th to 29th, Miss Gee, Miss Foulkes, Miss Draper, and some of the girls from Form VI and V Upper, had a very successful walking tour in the Lake District.

At the end of the Spring Term, we said good-bye to Miss Bardsley, who has since been at the Hereford High School. She left with our good wishes. Her place as Classical mistress at the Queen's School has been taken by Miss Wood, to whom we extended a hearty welcome.

The first three weeks of the Summer Term were entirely taken up with preparations for the Diamond Jubilee Celebrations. These included Sports for the School on the morning of Friday, May 27th, a Jubilee Dinner in the evening, a Commemoration Service in the Cathedral on the morning of Saturday, May 28th, and a Garden Party for Old Girls of the School on Saturday afternoon. An account of these events was written for the Cheshire Observer by an Old Girl of the School, now on the staff of the Observer, and we have been given permission to reproduce it in Have Mynde.

On the afternoon of Friday, June 17th, the Dean arranged a Service for the Chester Secondary Schools to commemorate the fourth centenary of the English Bible. Three boys and three girls had the great privilege of being allowed to take an active part in the Service by reading short passages from the Bible. Our three readers were Frances Leach, Barbara Gerrard and Pauline Astbury.

On Tuesday, June 21st, the School Dramatic Society, which includes girls from V Lower to VI, gave a performance to the rest of the School of "She Stoops to Conquer." It was an ambitious undertaking, and was carried out without help from any member of the Staff. We congratulate the members of the Society on the ingenuity and courage with which they tackled problems of dress and scenery, and thank them for giving us a very pleasant afternoon.

The following Tuesday, the Preparatory Department and Kindergarten gave an entertainment to which their parents were invited. The programme included physical exercises, music, recitations and a short play.

This year, the Annual General Meeting of the Old Girls' Association has been separated from the Garden Party, as we did not wish to combine business with our Jubilee Celebrations. The Meeting will be held on Wednesday, July 20th, at 5.30 p.m.

As is always the case at the end of the Summer Term, we have several farewells before us. Miss Wilcockson and Miss Draper are both leaving to be married, and we wish them every happiness. We feel sure that we shall not lose touch with either of them and that we shall often see them back at School.

We give our good wishes also to the girls who are leaving us in July. Having rendered useful service as members of the School Community, may they do the same on a larger scale and in wider spheres elsewhere.

M. T. NEDHAM.

CELEBRATION OF THE QUEEN'S SCHOOL DIAMOND JUBILEE.

(Reproduced, by kind permission, from the "Cheshire Observer").

The festivities began with a programme of sports for the present-day scholars on Friday morning, and a dinner was held at night at the Ambassadors Restaurant.

On Saturday morning, a special service was held in the Cathedral, when the Bishop of Chester (Dr. G. F. Fisher) preached the sermon. In the afternoon, a garden party for Old Girls was held at the school.

There was a representative gathering at the dinner. The Ambassadors' Orchestra played during dinner, and, after the toast to the King, a special toast was drunk to Queen Mary, who is Patroness of the School.

The speakers for the evening were the Bishop of Chester, the Mayor of Chester (Alderman George Barlow), Mrs. H. F. Brown, Miss Nedham, Miss Clay, Mr. F. F. Potter (Director of Education for Cheshire), and Mrs. Bernard Kitson.

Among those present were Mrs. Fisher, the Sheriff (Mrs. Kate Clarke) and Mr. Clarke, the Town Clerk (Mr. J. H. Dickson) and Mrs. Dickson, Alderman and Mrs. Peter Jones, Professor Newstead, Mr. Richardson Peel (Director of Education for the City) and Mrs. Richardson Peele, Dr. Kellett (Assistant Director of Education for the City), Miss K. Williams, Miss G. Williams, Miss J. Holland Williams, Miss R. B. Williams, Miss M. R. Wood and Mrs. Wyld.

Mrs. H. F. Brown, Chairman of the Governors, presided, and, with the Headmistress (Miss Nedham) and the former Headmistress (Miss Clay), received the guests. After wishing the Queen's School every prosperity and success on its Diamond Jubilee, the Bishop said he had seen a girls' school when he had been presenting prizes, but he had never before seen the aftermath, or the finished product, in such large quantities. He spoke of the occasion of the Golden Jubilee ten years ago, when Miss Clay gave the toast that he was now called upon to make, and he also mentioned Dean Howson in connection with the School at its beginning, when it was a tiny community of sixteen girls in Watergate Street, from which time the School had prospered so much. He explained that he was a Governor of the School, and proud to be such; in the main, he was an absentee Governor, called in when a crisis arose. He had contact with the School as regards the annual confirmation and from other sources, but these did not take him very far into the life of the School. He made the suggestion that a select number of Old Girls should arise and tell the company the worst thing they ever did.

"My experience," said the Bishop, "both as a headmaster and as a parent, is confined to the other sex. If you observe the result, it appears that the effect of boys' schools is to make their pupils specialists in idleness, and, of girls' schools, it is to make the pupils specialists in business of every kind. Masters spend a large amount of time trying to make boys work, and mistresses spend a lot of time seeing that girls do not overwork." A boy's object in life was always to do as little as he could, while the girl's whole time was occupied in doing something or other. The speaker then spoke of the only Old Girl he knew intimately, his secretary, who had a vast fund of knowledge of every kind, for which the Queen's School could not take any credit, for she always said that, when she was at school, she never did any work. In other ways there were fundamental differences between boys' and girls' schools. "When I was a headmaster, my wife and I planned to make the ideal school. She was to have the school and I was to be her secretary. This, we thought, would be the ideal combination," he said.

The Bishop spoke of the prosperity and health that the School had had during sixty years of progress. In 1878, school education for girls in this country began. Before that time it was not considered worth while to educate girls; they were regarded at one time as angels and idiots, and so their education was left out. Then that age-long tradition was broken, and girls were treated as something less than angels and more than idiots, and, therefore, worth while educating. The Victorians did things of which we could be proud and thankful. In this age the pioneers of education broke through this long tradition, and the education of girls all over the country began. They would be proud to see the result of their endeavour. "Sixty years of history you have behind you, with a proud tradition in the City of Chester. In those days you were proud of starting that tradition, and now you are maintaining it," he said. The Bishop spoke of his respect and admiration for Miss Nedham, who had served the School in one capacity or another, and to everyone's advantage. "You have a body of Old Girls full of corporate loyalty and love for the School; remember what you have inherited from the past, and be proud of the future of the School."

Mrs. H. F. Brown, responding, thanked the Bishop, and said sixty years was a venerable age for girls' schools, although, compared with boys' schools, it might seem a short time. The majority of the company present were Old Girls, but they were none of them old in the ordinary sense of the word. A great number of them were quite young, and all the rest were wonderful. They had present with them that night the present staff of the School and some representatives of former staffs, and she offered a hearty welcome to them all. Congratulations were due to the headmistress and staff on the excellent organisation of all the Diamond Jubilee Celebrations, not only the dinner and the school sports that morning, but also the two events to come the following day. It spoke eloquently of the team work that was done on the staff of the Queen's School, that the result was so successful. They had members of the governing body present that night. She did not feel qualified to speak as a Governor, although she was Chairman of the governing body. She had been a parent and an Old Girl of the School longer than a Governor. After sixty years of life, the School had its own point of view, its own age and traditions, and the latter were being kept up by old and present pupils and by the staff of the School. The Queen's School always had stood for a really liberal education ; it had always found time in its curriculum for music and art, as well as the usual school subjects. It had tried to give every opportunity to the clever girls, and had encouraged girls who were fitted to go on to the Universities, and, at the same time, had tried to give a good sound education to the girls who were not good at passing examinations, but would be valuable members of the community in years to come. She wished them many more decades of useful work and prosperity.

Miss Nedham gave the toast of " The Old Girls." She said they were delighted to have representatives there of all the different periods of the School, including members of the Sixth Form. They had also with them one of the original members of the School in Watergate Street, and they accorded a special welcome to her. Messages had come from many Old Girls who were not able to be present ; there was one from India, and one from Vancouver. Miss Nedham said she had been looking through the old records of the School, and had found that, on April 3rd, 1897, " a preliminary meeting was held for the establishment of a Queen's School Union of past and present pupils." Mrs. Sandford was in the chair, and there were 49 present. In 1899, Miss Day was elected as one of the joint secretaries, and she had held this office ever since. She spoke of the great personal interest that Miss Day took in every individual member of the Old Girls' Association. Miss Mabel Dickson had been treasurer of the Infirmary Cot Fund since 1904, and Mrs. Ayrton was elected hon. treasurer of the Association in 1915, when she succeeded Miss Amelia Scott, now Mrs. Wyld, who was present at the dinner. Mrs. Ayrton had only recently resigned this office, and Miss Ayrton had undertaken to carry on the work. In the 41 years of its existence, the Association had grown steadily, and the work involved was now considerable. Thanks were due to all who had contributed to its success.

One Old Girl had marked the Diamond Jubilee by the generous gift of £100. The interest of this money was to be used to help girls of limited means who wished to continue their training at a University. She hoped that this would form the nucleus of a fund for this purpose, and thanked the Old Girl concerned for her generosity. If the fund should increase, Miss Nedham would like part of the money to be available for girls going into other forms of training, apart from Universities. She was immensely proud of the enthusiasm among the Old Girls, and interested in their various occupations. She was glad to see two members of the medical and surgical professions there. She was proud of the Old Girls rendering useful service in their own homes and various other ways and places. There were at the School quite a number of the daughters of Old Girls, also some of their sons. Miss Nedham hoped that the Queen's School Union of past and present pupils would long continue to grow in numbers and strength, and that the recently-formed London branch would flourish.

Mrs. Bernard Kitson (Dorothy M. Stewart), replying for the Old Girls, said it was exactly 40 years ago to the day since she first entered the Queen's School. It was 25 years since she had visited the School, and she was amazed at the changes that had taken place. It was only when one was an Old Girl that one realised what the School meant. Their character was the one thing for which they were solely responsible, and they owed that development to their fellow-scholars or staff with whom they were in contact during those years at school.

Mrs. Kitson mentioned the various head-mistresses who had done so much for the School during the last century—Mrs. Sandford, Miss Clay and Miss Nedham. They owed to the School their gratitude for their most precious possessions—their friends. These were the greatest friendships in their lives. They might lie dormant for years, through circumstances over which they had no control, but they lived on. The speaker finished by saying that Miss Day was the greatest friend of everyone present.

Miss Clay, proposing the toast of "The Guests," said how proud she was that so many Old Girls were present to celebrate this occasion in the life of the School. Speaking of the Mayor, who is a Governor of the School, she said that Mayors had occupied a large place in her education, especially the Mayors of Chester. After spending her childhood in London, where the Mayor was shown to her as a person travelling in a large gold coach, or drinking large quantities of turtle soup, it was only when she came to Chester that she found that they were real people. She had to thank many of them for the loan of the Town Hall on a number of occasions. "As for Directors of Education," she said, referring to Mr. Potter, "I am really on safer ground. I know when they were invented, and I have, in a small degree, helped to invent them. When they are good, they are very, very good—and on this present occasion I have nothing more to say about them."

In reply, the Mayor (Alderman George Barlow) said that a great honour had been paid to him when he was asked to be present at the Diamond Jubilee. Among the educational authorities of the county and city, as well as in the Council, there was great pride in the Queen's School. There were many great scholars who had made their names in history, particularly in the medical and surgical professions. As a Governor, he could say how proud they were of Miss Nedham and the members of the staff. He was also proud that his two daughters had been educated at the School. His daughter and grand-daughter were unable to be present. Referring to Miss Clay's speech, he said that, only a few days ago, he and the Sheriff had ridden in a fine coach through the streets of Chester to open Bertram Mills' Circus. He wished the School every prosperity in the future as it had had in the past.

Mr. F. F. Potter (Cheshire Director of Education) said that he had also had two daughters at the School. Referring to the Victorian days, he spoke of another Diamond Jubilee, that of Queen Victoria, and he felt that that night, in a different way, was a very great occasion in a School of that kind. Sixty years was a long period in the history of girls' schools in this country. The School was fortunate in the very few headmistresses it had had in that period of its history. Two especially would be in every mind—Miss Clay and Miss Nedham. Miss Clay had been head-mistress for nearly half of the sixty years, and for twenty-three years she saw the development of the School. The School had also been fortunate in its long train of loyal staff. "I know," he said, "that you have names for many of them that do not appear on the prospectus." A school of this kind, with a very small endowment, always had difficulties, many of them financial. The Governors were always trying to make both ends meet financially, and it was only right that the authorities should come to the aid of the Governors in their emergencies. During the years he had been connected with the School, that aid had steadily increased, and he hoped it would continue to do so. More buildings were still needed to bring the School up to modern requirements. There was a great need for a gymnasium, also for better dining accommodation. He looked forward to the time when both these needs would be supplied. If all the Old Girls of the School who were in existence to-day—and there were many hundreds—gave half a guinea or a guinea, the gymnasium would be started to-morrow. In these days, when they were apt to rely entirely on public funds, there was still an opportunity for private gifts. On the educational side, they rejoiced in the increase in numbers, which had steadily risen during the last few years. They were not quite so happy about the numbers in the senior part of the School. From the authorities' point of view, they would like to see the numbers of the pupils from the age of 11 showing the same rapid and steady increase that was shown in other parts of the School. He wished them every prosperity and success in the years that were to come.

SERVICE IN CATHEDRAL.

The Diamond Jubilee Commemoration Service was held in the Cathedral on Saturday. The School was present, and also a large number of Old Girls and parents. Minor Canon Edwards officiated at the service, and the Dean (Right Rev. Norman Tubbs) read the lesson from Ecclesiasticus. Canon Simpson acted as Bishop's Chaplain. The hymns were "Let us, with a gladsome mind," "All lands and peoples, all the earth," and "Now thank we all our God." The Cathedral choir sang the anthem "O praise God in His holiness" (Robert Whyte). Mr. Malcolm Boyle was at the organ.

The Bishop (Dr. G. F. Fisher) took as his text the words "Here we have no continuing city." He said they were there to offer thanks for a continuing School and to commemorate the 60th anniversary of its foundation. They did not merely give thanks for the fact that the School had endured so long, or for the fact that it had grown to its present size and prosperity. Mere increase in time or size was not in itself merit in either man or school. What they gave thanks for was the purpose of the School, which had been increasingly fulfilled, and for all those who had assisted in working for that purpose. They offered thanks for all those who had in some measure contributed to that fulfilment. They thanked the founders, benefactors, headmistresses and members of the staff who had given to the School their vision, loyalty, service and devotion, and who, in giving, had received back so much spiritual worth. They thought of the girls who, generation by generation, had been taken into into the life and past of the School, and who had received so much from it.

They, too, had made their contribution to the corporate life of the School, and were included in this continuing and increasing purpose. For it they were there to give thanks to Almighty God. What was the increasing purpose which constituted the life of the School? Education was, and always must be, based upon religious activity by which reality and real life were revealed. Where there was reality in life, there was God. Their response to reality, which was also their response to education, was, of course, largely shaped by the past. The present was born from the past, and education, secular and religious, meant entering into the heritage of the past. Members of such a School were introduced, stage by stage, to that great inheritance, so that they might be enriched and strengthened by the wisdom of the past. Did that sound rather high-flown? If it did, it was true. A large part of the time of the School was devoted to giving its pupils knowledge and training and other things which had enabled them to stand on their own feet in the competitive world. But all the time they were trying to lift them on to the shoulders of those who had gone before, so that they might see what they saw in the proper faith and wisdom of the past, so that they should follow it faithfully and hand it on to those who came after them. Their response to reality, however shaken, had to be made now, in the present in which they lived, and in such time it was difficult for them to think steadily in terms of steady, ordinary growth and definite purpose. Life to-day was so perilous and so kaleidoscopic and too much like the Shell advertisements: "This is where we are—that was." Those who were growing up had had no experience at all of a stable world; they had only known one of breathless change and crisis. Not unnaturally, they were impatient of a gospel of a long view and slow working. They asked for a gospel that would serve them in the present day. It was the function of education and religion to provide them with that. They knew full well that their teaching should bring the principles of duty and truth before the present generation, to enable them to get into direct contact with the world as it was now. In a world of short views, constant change and conflict with one another, a world of short cuts and distrust, how could they be set upon the road to true life and citizenship? That was the problem which confronted every school as it confronted the Church. They shaped life by the past, but they must live in the present and build for the future. They could do so in Jesus Christ, Whose reality was eternal, and the eternal directly bore on their lives.

The service closed with the singing of "Now thank we all our God," and the Blessing, pronounced by the Bishop.

THE SCHOOL SPORTS.

Although the weather was cloudy, there was a good attendance of parents, visitors, old and present girls, at the Queen's School Sports, held on Friday, on the school playing field. The Sports marked the beginning of the School's Diamond Jubilee Celebrations, which are being held to-day and Saturday.

Besides the orthodox races—three-legged and sack races, the long jump and various flat races—there was also a special race for fathers, and there would have been one for mothers had there not been a sudden shower of rain. Perhaps the most amusing of all, for spectators and competitors alike, were the sack, obstacle and kindergarten races. An added incentive to success was the fact that the winners, the seconds and the thirds all scored a certain number of graded marks for their various Houses. The heats were run off earlier in the term.

The prizes were distributed in the Hall of the School, owing to the rain, by Mrs. Meyrick Browne, with Mr. Alfred Ayrton presiding. The Senior School Cup was given by Colonel W. E. Brown, and the Lower and Junior School Cups by Mrs. Hird-Jones.

Mr. Ayrton, who is Deputy-Chairman of the School Governors, said they were always anxious to see more and more games. The body and mind must work together; games taught them self-control and how to take an umpire's verdict quietly and without fuss. Mr. Ayrton introduced Mrs. Meyrick Browne to the audience, explaining that, when she was at school, she was known as Margaret Welsby. In the old days she was very energetic, both in school duties and in games; she was an outstanding example of one who had combined learning with games. There was no one more fitted to distribute the prizes than an Old Girl who had been so efficient in both lines.

After the prizes had been distributed, thanks were returned to the games mistress, Miss Wilcockson, and her committee for the excellent organisation. Cheers were given for them all, and also for Mrs. Meyrick Browne and Mr. Ayrton.

In conclusion, Miss Nedham said that various messages of congratulation had been received, and one had arrived from Mrs. MacTavish (Miss McDonald), who is in Vancouver.

Umpires for the races were Miss Trubshaw and Miss Foulkes. Miss Wilcockson (games mistress) and Miss Draper acted as starters, and Miss King as scorer.

Refreshments were provided for parents and friends in the school.

House results: 1, Sandford (79); 2, Thompson (75); 3, Hastings (39); 4, Westminster (38).

THE GARDEN PARTY.

A garden party was held at the school on Saturday, when a great number of Old Girls were present, besides Miss Nedham, Miss Clay, the school staff. After tea an amusing entertainment was given by the staff, which was much appreciated.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Scrimgeour was a Governor of the Queen's School for several years, and we were grateful to her for the active interest that she took in all our concerns. We had the pleasure of seeing her at School on many and various occasions, and she was particularly helpful in matters relating to the building of our New Wing.

Through her death in the Autumn of 1937, the School lost a comparatively recent but a very real friend.

UNIVERSITY LOAN FUND.

In this, our Diamond Jubilee year, Miss Day has added to her many kindnesses to the School by the generous gift of £100. She asks that the interest on this money may be used to assist Queen's School girls of limited means who wish to continue their education at a University. She hopes that others will support this scheme and that her gift will form the nucleus of a fund for this purpose.

It is possible that some Old Girls may prefer to give help to Queen's School girls preparing for other careers.

I shall be very glad if any who are interested in either of these schemes will write to me and give me their views. If they are able to enclose donations, however small, they will be most gratefully accepted.

M. T. Nedham.

GAMES, 1937-38.

Tennis, 1st VI.

Joan Hardy (Captain). A player with very good style. She had strong, well-placed drives, but net-play and service, though reliable, could be more powerful. She studied the game and knew the good and weak points of her team. As a captain she was most encouraging.

(Frances Leach, Vice-Captain).

Miriam Morgan. A determined player, who could be relied on to play up in a losing game. She had a good length forehand drive, but must try to make more use of her backhand. Service was strong, though rather erratic. More confidence is needed in her net play and volleying.

Frances Leach. Although her strokes were not strong, she was able to return difficult balls, and was quick in backing up her partner. Net play improved during the season, and her net shots were often the deciding point of a game.

Mary Rees. A player who needs more determination. She has a very good cross-court drive, but should try to vary her strokes more. She should not expect to make a winning shot from every stroke, but rather work up for an opening.

Barbara Gerrard. A steady player, with a strong, well-placed drive and good service. More confidence is needed in net play, and she should try to move more quickly. Both she and her partner should try to be more aggressive, especially when leading, and keep up the attack to the end of the match.

Margaret Gerrard. A promising member of the team, with good length, powerful drives and a very good volley; but she should try to be quicker on her feet.

Joan Hardy, (Captain).

Joan Hardy and Miriam Morgan gained their colours.

The House Cup was won by Westminster.

HOCKEY, 1st XI.

Goal: Elspeth Stalker. A player whose regular practice in the dinner hour helped to gain her place in the team. She was very good in a "scrum," but must watch slow balls very carefully.

Right Back: Felicity Blake. A lack of speed was a disadvantage to her game. Tackling and interchanging were quite good, but she must remember to keep on the goal side of her opponent.

Left Back: Joyce Davis. A reliable player, whose tackling was most persistent. Her passes to the forwards were accurate and she was untiring in her efforts to get the ball out of the circle.

Right Half: Mildred Thompson. A speedy player, whose hard drives were an advantage to both her attacks and defence. Her game improved during the season when she had learned to back up her forwards and to be quicker in tackling back.

Centre Half : Pamela Sabine. Her boundless energy was an inspiration to the rest of the team. Her attacking and defending were equally good and her stickwork was neat and most effective.

Left Half : Frances Leach (Captain). A most energetic player, whose working knowledge of all positions in the field made her game very sound. She anticipated cleverly, and her stickwork in tackling and clearing was particularly neat. Passes to forwards were easy to take, yet sufficiently varied to confuse the opposing defence.

(Margaret Pirrie, Vice-Captain).

Right Wing : Nanette Broster. A keen player who improved steadily throughout the season. Her stickwork was good, but she should vary her passes.

Right Inner : Barbara Robinson. Her game was greatly improved when she learned to keep up with the forwards and to go far enough down the field to help her defence. Her stickwork and shooting were very good at the end of the season.

Centre : Margaret Pirrie. She did well in holding a rather shaky forward line together. Her passes were accurate when she avoided flying hits, and her shooting was very good.

Left Inner : Mary Rees. A very quick player with neat stickwork, who combined well with centre and left wing. Her passing was sometimes inaccurate, but it improved during the season.

Left Wing : Cynthia Hullah. A speedy player who too often spoilt a good run down the field by hitting the ball over the line instead of into the circle. Her game will improve when she has learned to pass sooner.

Frances Leach (Captain).

Margaret Pirrie, Mary Rees, Joyce Davis and Barbara Robinson gained their colours.

The Senior House Cup was won by Sandford.

In the Junior House Matches, rain stopped play on the second day.

HOCKEY, 2nd XI.

Goal : Christine Griffiths. A reliable player, whose hard work at the end of the season produced good results.

Right Back : Barbara Gerrard. A useful member of the team. Her tackling and passing were good, but she must not be drawn too far up the field unless she can be certain of getting back.

(Barbara Phelps, Vice-Captain).

Left Back : Nancy Adam. She played a good game. Her stickwork was good, and she was a persistent tackler.

Right Half : Noreen Sargent. An energetic and useful player who made very good progress during the term. Her passing was accurate and quite hard.

or Irene Barton. A keen player who worked hard. She tackled with determination, and her stickwork showed improvement.

Centre Half : Patricia Smith. A steady player who worked very hard. She must be ready to back up her centre as well as marking her opposing centre.

Left Half : Violet Fox. A fast and determined player, who backed up her forwards well. Her stickwork was good, and, with more match experience, she should play a good game.

Right Wing : Evelyn Brickland. A speedy player : the effect of her good centre pass was often spoilt through being given too late. She should try to be more aggressive in the circle.

Right Inner : Dawn Hitchen. A useful player in the circle, but she must vary her tactics at other times and improve her stickwork.

Centre : Brenda Ostin. A keen and energetic player. When she has learnt to combine speed with ball control she should do well.

Left Inner : Barbara Phelps. A keen player who worked hard and showed steady improvement. She was a persistent attack, but, like other members of the team, needs to improve her stickwork.

Left Wing : Joan Evans. A very fast player who should do well when she remembers to put all her energy into the left wing position and not into left half as well.

Barbara Gerrard (Captain).

LACROSSE. 1st XII.

Goal : Pauline Astbury. She made herself a most effective barrier to the shots of the attacks. Her long passes improved, but she must try to be quicker in passing, because all the attacks become marked.

Point : Irene Barton. A player who improved as she became better acquainted with the team game. Her tackling and intercepting were fairly good, but her catching was rather uncertain. She must be quicker and more accurate in passing the ball.

Cover Point : Joyce Davis. Good. Her stickwork was most reliable and her interchanging and intercepting were equally good. She was particularly useful in helping the other defence.

Third Man : Pamela Sabine. The most energetic member of the team. Her marking and tackling were most persistent and she combined well with the other defence players. Picking up was sometimes slow, but, on the whole, her stickwork was very good.

Right Defence Wing : Violet Fox. She improved steadily throughout the season. Her tackling and marking were good, but sometimes spoilt by bad passing. Her intercepting and interchanging were also good.

Left Defence Wing : Margaret Pirrie. She was a most useful member of the team and one of the few who could dodge successfully. Her stickwork and tackling were always reliable, and her knowledge of interchanging was sound.

Centre : Frances Leach (Captain). One of the few members of the team who made the game look easy to play. She made many openings for the attacks, but these often failed because of their weaker stickwork. Long shots need more practice to make them effective.

(Margaret Pirrie, Vice-Captain).

Right Attack Wing : Mary Rees. She possessed speed and a good, hard shot. Her game on the whole was rather ineffective because she held her crosse in such a way that it was too easy to tackle.

Left Attack Wing : Mary Howe. She worked hard, but her stickwork was too uncertain, especially when she was marked. Her dodging, too, needs much practice.

Third Home : Barbara Robinson. She made improvement, especially in stickwork, during the season. Her passing was accurate on the whole, and she was always ready to come up the field when the defence were hard pressed.

Second Home : Cynthia Hullah. She was the most active of all the Homes in getting free. Her stickwork was rather erratic, and her game will improve when she has learned to run straight to goal and not in circles.

THE LITERARY SOCIETY.

The Literary Society has held three interesting meetings during the 1937-38 season. The first was held late in the Autumn Term, on December 3rd, when a reading of "Dear Brutus" was much enjoyed. Two meetings took place in the Spring Term, on February 18th and March 4th. The first took the form of prose reading, and stories on Sport and Ghosts were read by the Staff and the girls respectively. We were happy to welcome members of V Upper and V Lower to the second meeting when "The Romantic Young Lady" was read and enjoyed.

Marion Steen (Secretary).

THE DRAMATIC SOCIETY.

The Dramatic Society has spent a happy and busy year. At the end of the Autumn Term, three short plays were given, "The Oak Settle," "Far, Far Away" and "The Spinsters of Lushe." No performance was given in the Spring Term, but, shortly after half-term in the Summer Term, "She Stoops to Conquer" was presented.

Margaret Pirrie }
Marion Steen } Producers.

THE SCHOOL CHOIR.

The Voluntary Choir has again had a vigorous year, and its membership has grown to 76. There was great enthusiasm when it came to choosing the 40 who were to represent the School in the Secondary School Section (non-competitive) of the Chester Musical Festival.

Mr. Cuthbert Kelly was the adjudicator, and we were proud of the criticism that he gave to us. The set songs were—

If Fortune You Would Know—Bach

Fairy Song—Dyson

Own choice : Pastoral—Gustav Holst.

A WALKING TOUR IN THE LAKE DISTRICT.

My first resolution, made before the School Lake District Walking Tour, was to write a sarcastic letter to Daddy as soon as I had climbed the Kirkstone Pass, for he had teasingly suggested that I should never achieve this. However, I am proud of the fact that I kept my resolution and successfully resisted the temptation (didn't we all ?) to put a "hitch" to the "hike." I wonder if those who tootled the flute, blew down the mouth-organ and resurrected "John Brown's Body" found this pastime exhausting. It almost seemed so when, as we trudged over those brown hills, a Rolls Royce and a lorry passed by with something familiar in the passengers' appearance, and I almost thought I heard the shrill, high-pitched notes of a flute!

A former traveller who succeeded in this strenuous climb wrote, at the Kirkstone Pass Inn on the summit, that—

"If I was a lover and loved a lass
Who lived at the top of the Kirkstone Pass,
I swear that I'd love her for ever and ever,
But go up and visit her, never, no never."

We did not express our feelings in rhyme, but we felt the same sentiment as we enjoyed delicious ices and lemonade in the low-ceilinged rooms of this out-of-the-way inn—and adjusted elasto-plast on blisters.

The following day, after having cooked our own breakfasts and swept and dusted the hostel, we set out to climb Place Fell, a craggy mountain overlooking Ullswater. Half way up we separated, the V Upper group energetically following the pony-track to the summit. Here our adventures began; the path merged into a bog and a heavy drizzle began to fall. But for our chatter, it would have been eerie there—surrounded by hunched, misty mountains and with a squelching bog underfoot. However, we had plenty to occupy our minds, for the descent was a prolonged, undignified slither over screes. Indeed, it was so steep that often I seemed to be falling headlong into the lake below. However, about an hour later, we were sitting in a row on a log at the foot of the mountain; our knees were rather shaky, and we must have looked like seven little nigger boys, but we felt very elated and considered ourselves experienced mountaineers.

We then decided that the least we deserved was a huge farm-house tea, which we obtained only after a long walk through fields and a paddle over a stony brook. I think it must have been this that made everyone ready for two extra pieces of cake. I have seldom seen more amusing expressions than those of certain members of our party as they crossed this stream; they might have been amateur fire-walkers, and gingerly stepped on each pebble as if it were a dozen chicken's eggs about to hatch.

As the evening was so fine, we decided to spend our time on the lake. I think that this was one of our most enjoyable experiences, despite the fact that most of our attempts at rowing nearly resulted in a backward somersault out of the boat. Only the tiniest golden clouds flecked the sky, and Place Fell was reflected perfectly in the still waters of the lake, which lapped lazily on the sides of the boat. We slept soundly that night, indeed, so soundly that a round of snores applauded the dramatic end of one ghost story, and when my pillow slipped off my bunk on to my friend's face below, she merely turned over with a contented sigh. The next day we walked up Grisedale Valley to the Grasmere Youth Hostel, where we spent another two days, and on the way some of us climbed Helvellyn.

We all had a grand holiday, and this was chiefly due, we feel, to Miss Gee, who looked after us in every way, from arranging accommodation at the Youth Hostels to giving us barley sugar at night. Especially I have to thank her for the tomato she gave me at the top of Helvellyn. I was hungry enough to eat my haversack, and should certainly never have reached Grasmere or the Queen's School without it.

A VISIT TO A COAL-MINE.

In the Spring Term, Mr. Evans, of Llay Main Colliery, very kindly offered to take a party of two mistresses and four girls down the mine. After many shufflings of slips of paper in a bowl, the lucky four were at last chosen. What a thrill to find that we were amongst them!

The great day arrived. We met at school, and Miss Morris and Miss Dickie very kindly took us by car to the colliery. We first went to the offices, where we were shown a number of interesting plans and diagrams of the mine. These included a detailed vertical section, on a paper that was many yards long, and an extensive ground plan. This was most interesting to all of us, and gave us an idea as to what to expect, but we were all eager to get to the more exciting part—that of actually going down the mine.

Before coming, we had been advised to wear our oldest clothes and to take some sort of covering for our heads. Several of us wished we had brought our cameras with us to take a snapshot of the quaint group we made. After being shown over the surface workings of the mine, we were each given a Davy lamp and then directed to the cage. It was a rectangular-shaped compartment, built of iron. The sides of it had ventilation holes completely covering them,—hence its name, cage—and double iron doors were at each end.

The cage started on its downward journey, at first very slowly, then gradually getting faster, until we could hear the wind rushing past us. Imagine us, rushing through the darkness, clutching a Davy lamp in one hand and holding tightly to the rail beside us with the other. Quite suddenly we seemed to go deaf, and could hardly hear anything. We were told this was due to the air pressure. The lift was now coming to a standstill after rushing us through the darkness three times slower than on any ordinary day, as this was a Sunday and no miners were working. We arrived at the bottom, all intact, and were instructed to keep in single file and to mind our heads. In spite of this warning, we both managed to bump them once.

The passages were fairly wide, and we were walking in a roughly-made path between two lines for the trucks to run along. In some parts of the roof the girders had fallen away and the roof just consisted of coal. All around us was a hissing noise. After walking for quite a long way, we came to a coal face where the coal was being cut away and loaded into trucks. At the suggestion of one member of the party, we each dug a small piece of the coal out for ourselves and took it home as a memento.

The return journey was much harder going, as it was all uphill. We plodded along in single file, carefully avoiding the railway lines and the large stones scattered about. The gradient, we were told, was one in four.

Finally, the passage widened and lights appeared, hung at regular intervals along the sides. At last we saw the lights of the small offices. We went in and waited for a few moments while Mr. Evans went outside and spoke to a workman, who telephoned a message to the top of the shaft, saying that we were going up. We stepped into the cage, and it started off, slowly at first, gradually increasing speed. Once we flashed past a light suspended from the side of the shaft. At last we reached the top and stepped out of the cage. We were not very dirty, but our shoes and stockings were covered with fine grey dust. After a wash and tidy-up, Mr. and Mrs. Evans very kindly took us to their house for a meal.

MY NIGHTMARE.

Our Sports Day was a jolly day,
 The Sports were our delight ;
 But you'd have laughed if in my dream
 You'd been, that very night.

Instead of running, you were made
To somersault along ;
The three-legged race you ran in sacks,
It really was all wrong.

The long jump was most hard to do,
The sand it was all ice ;
You had to jump on roller skates,
Which wasn't very nice.

The fathers had a funny race,
With daughters on their backs ;
They cart-wheeled for a mile or so,
Their heads tied up in sacks.

It was a really thrilling night,
With fun 'twas packed galore ;
I went to sleep upon my bed,
I woke upon the floor !

NONSENSE RHYMES.

One sunny day the sky went green,
The grass a lovely blue,
And folk were walking on their heads :
Just fancy me and you !

And not content with people odd,
The trees they did their share,
The branches grew from out the ground,
The trunks stood up quite bare.

The cats and dogs were friends once more,
The fowl they swam about,
The fish were sporting on the shore,
The world was inside out.

The doctor took my shirt away,
He did it for the best ;
And yet he had the nerve to say—
" There's something on your chest " !
" Of course there is," I said to him,
" It is my woollen vest ! "

LINES TO A TADPOLE.

O thou, who flittest round a jam-jar tall,
And with coquettish air dost flick thy tail,
I see thee to thy sprightly playmates call.
Thou, fascinating creature, never fail
To bring me joy in watching thy bright eyes,
Thy rosebud mouth and black and shining mail!

PARIS, 1937.

I had arrived at midnight at Fontenay-sous-Bois, a suburb of Paris. Madame and her eldest daughter, Monique, my correspondent for two years, had met me at the station and had received me in good order and repair from my travelling companion. Straight to bed, and all the performance of introductions to face in the morning! The family were St Quentin's, but had collected under the grand-parental roof for an orgy of visiting the sights of Paris and its Exhibition.

Next morning it was a great thrill to hear unknown voices speaking a very bewildering language. A timid knock at the door and a procession of five charming girls, one a cousin, ranging from seven to fifteen, trooped in and exuberantly kissed me on both cheeks! An exchange of little presents quickly broke the ice, and in a few moments we were chattering like magpies in a mixture of French and English which might not have obtained high marks but was certainly effective. Later I was greeted by Monsieur and Madame Bacquet, Grand'maman, Grand-Papa, and one or two uncles and aunts.

Unfortunately, the family had breakfasted, and I was compelled to take mine before a large but extremely polite audience. My antics with a very large bowl of milk, a very tiny teaspoon and an enormous hunk of bread must have been a perfect example of nervousness and of slow motion, for Monique, patiently waiting, remarked that the English were very slow eaters. Next morning I observed that the teaspoon was a formality and more direct methods were permitted.

My new friends were very anxious for me to see as much as possible of French life. Shopping visits were particularly interesting and amusing. The open-air market seemed to be the Mecca of every house-wife in Fontenay, complete with enormous shopping bag and brightly coloured slippers. The French are very careful shoppers, and we would troop home with all kinds of food-stuffs which, in England, would be delivered by errand boys.

My first visit to the hairdresser's was an exciting event. After much preliminary rehearsing I had a few sentences off by heart and could give the most exact directions as to length, cut and so on. At the end of several minutes' forced conversation, it came out that the coiffeur had lived in America for some years and spoke fluent English !

Games do not appear to be an important part of French school-life. On asking Monique if she played cricket, she replied : " But no. In any case it is a very stupid game. One only tries to hit a stick with a hard ball ! "

All the younger folk were periodically taken on well-planned excursions to the City and Exhibition. As Monsieur is an architect, he delighted in showing in great detail the beauties of the famous buildings and monuments. His children were exploring Paris for the first time, and it was clear that much thought had been given to working out a methodical programme. We found the Musée du Carnavelet, with its historical exhibits, most interesting. It is somewhat similar to the South Kensington Museum.

The Exhibition was fascinating, partly because visitors from most European countries flocked there. We spent much time in the Algerian Section, which was on an island in the Seine. With its camels and sand, Arabs and veiled women, we thought it the most interesting exhibit. I learnt that it was polite to refer to the natives as " noirs " and not as " nègres." One day I unsuspectingly began to take a photograph of a picturesque " noir " in an enormous straw hat, selling brass ornaments. In a moment all was pandemonium, and I became the centre of a gesticulating crowd of natives, excitedly jabbering in a weird tongue. Presumably the Algerians had strong objections to being photographed. From this uncomfortable position I was tactfully extricated by my friends.

GRANDPAPA.

Grandpapa is old and grey,
His spectacles are all askew,
His suit is brown and very old,
His trousers patched with blue.
He sits outside the cottage door
On warm and sunny days ;
On winter nights he sits beside
The kitchen's cheerful blaze.
Now grandpapa is very old,
And never travels far,
He hates the wind and rain and cold,
Poor, lonely grandpapa !

THE CIRCUS.

A is admission, the price we have paid.
 B is to buy, the programme they made.
 C is for cheers, as our clown entered in,
 D is dislike, he had for his twin.
 E is for efforts, to ride on a horse,
 F is the fuss, when he fell in the gorse.
 G is the gallop, the hero appears,
 H is the heroine, and everyone cheers.
 I is for Indians, who make an attack,
 J is for javelin, they throw with a knack.
 K is for kick, as the horses run round,
 L is for leaps, that they make without sound.
 M is the monkey, riding a bike,
 N is to notice how much they it like.
 O is 'an ostrich, a swift-running bird,
 P is the polar bear, of it you've heard.
 Q is the quiver, when lions come in,
 R is the roar, when their turn does begin.
 S is the scream of a child sitting by,
 T is the trouble, when she starts to cry.
 U is the uniform, the ring-master wears,
 V is the valiant who conjures with chairs.
 W is wishing the programme was longer,
 X is the exit, towards which we wander.
 Y is the yearning to be back again,
 Z is the zebra which my love did gain.

CAPTIVITY.

Ann in chill moonlight unlocks
 The door that blocks
 The way to her forest green,
 With its foliage like sheen.

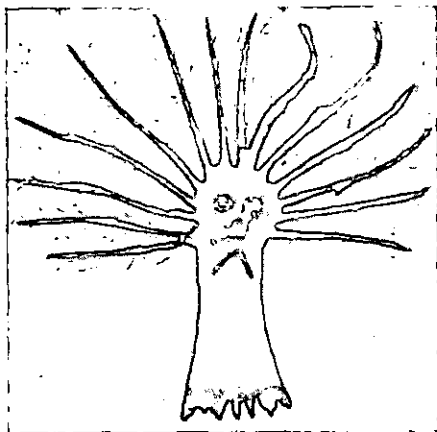

Ann in chill moonlight unlocks
 The gate that blocks
 From her the roaring river, the swirling weir,
 Though they are always near.

Ann in chill moonlight locks
 The door that blocks
 The land of light and the sound
 Of the birds on the distant mound.

a number of prickles. No caterpillars could come to him now. The trees did not laugh at him. The Holly was very happy. Mother Nature passed by and smiled to him. She was glad he was happy now. She had kept her promise.

round about him was making fun of him. "Look at the Holly, he has hardly any leaves on him!" cried the Elm. "How shabby he looks," said the Fir. "We are much finer than he," said the Oak. They laughed at the poor Holly.

In a few days' time, the Holly could stand it no longer, and, seeing Mother Nature passing, he called to her. "Hi! Mother Nature! Please come here," shouted the Holly. Mother Nature came to him. "Oh! Mother Nature! I am so sad and so tender. Please give me something to defend myself from these caterpillars." Mother Nature said: "You have always been patient and minded your business, but be patient a little longer and I promise you shall have something to protect yourself next Spring." The Holly thanked Mother Nature and felt a little happier.

Winter came with its snow and sleet, and, even though the Holly was an evergreen, he had no leaves on at all! Spring came.

One morning, the Holly stretched himself. He opened his eyes, and on him he had the most lovely green gown of leaves; not only that but sticking out from each leaf, were

THE DEATH OF ROLAND AND OLIVER

(An Historical Poem).

Oh, Roland was a young knight bold,
And Oliver his friend.

Now I shall tell to you the tale
Of how they met their end.

Now Charlemagne to war had gone,
The Saracens to fight.

Hoping he could kill each one,
Or else put them to flight.

Oh, Roland then, and Oliver,
Had charge of the vanguard,
When suddenly they were ambushed,
To save their lives fought hard.

So Roland blew his hunting horn,
He blew it loud and long.
Their enemy was by the king,
Who sought to do them wrong.

To Charlemagne he said, at length,
"That sound was just the wind,"
So, satisfied, the king turned back,
Not knowing who had sinned.

So Roland blew his horn again,
He hoped the king would hear,
For if help did not reach them soon,
Their fate they knew was clear.

The troops by Charlemagne had heard
And recognised the sound,
So Charlemagne cried "Turn about,"
For Roland must be found.

When Charlemagne reached Roncesvalles
The ground was a mass of blood,
With mangled bodies here and there,
All trampled in the mud.

At this sad sight the king did weep
For both his favourites' fate;
When he found out the treachery,
His anger it was great.

The villain did not quite escape,
The king found out his plot,
And, after he had lectured him,
He killed him on the spot.

So Rolands' fate it was avenged,
 For when the king did fight,
 He killed off all the Saracens,
 Not putting them to flight.

MONDAY MORNING PLEASURES.

Waiting on the station,
 The train is drawing near.
 I'm sure I know my history,
 Although the dates seem queer.

My geography, forgotten ?
 It's still at school (I hope !)
 Although it means an order mark,
 With it I couldn't cope.

At last I've done my algebra
 (Of course, it isn't right).
 I've nearly done my German,
 So far a sorry plight.

My French I did at breakfast,
 Verbs and marmalade complete.
 So now I've finished parleying,
 Comes Latin tout de suite.

But Latin meets disaster
 While swotting in the train,
 I aimed it at my neighbour,
 But broke a window-pane.

And now the guard is coming
 (No doubt a heavy fine).
 Instead, he calmly hands me
 That Latin book of mine !

I've worked and scrapped and swotted ;
 The results—well, you can see.
 I may not be a poet,
 But a slacker ? No, not me !

ADVICE TO A PREFECT IN THE STYLE OF ASCHAM.

First let her, having been given charge over other scholars, be of care to behave with great seemliness, so that precept alone may not be the guide. Let her be neat in her garb, well washed, of quiet and dignified mien, of posture not ungainly and of steady, even gait. I would not have her of too great a conceit, yet must she be ever mindful of her station, and yet again must she realise the limitations of her power. Therefore do I counsel a proper meekness of behaviour, and then will her charges practise such meekness so desirable in the young. If a prefect would have herself well liked, then let her be of unfailing cheerfulness, and in her own obedience to the rules she can fittingly expect of others a similar obedience, and with full confidence admonish those who are lax, whilst commending those of dutiful nature.

THE DEATH OF A POOR VILLAGER.

He was as old as old could be
His little eye could scarcely see,
His nose was pointed like a beak,
His limbs were weary, worn and weak.

He stumbled down the village street,
Shuffling along on age-worn feet,
Up the steps, and down the bank,
Then down upon his knees he sank.

With folded hands he gazed ahead,
Then took his hat from off his head.
"Oh Lord," he said, "Give back my sight,
That I may see once more the light."

With this he stumbled to his feet,
Back to the old, old aged street.
That night he lay upon his bed,
And ne'er again he raised his head.

THE MOTH AND THE BUTTERFLY.

Once upon a time there was a beautiful Tiger Moth who was even more beautiful than all the other Tiger Moths. The orange, yellow and brown pattern on his underwings was brighter, the markings on his body clearer, and the brown and white top wings handsomer than those of his fellows.

But, like many people, he was only beautiful in body. He was vain, proud and selfish. One evening, he met a pretty little white Cabbage Butterfly. "Good evening, sir," said she politely, "I am afraid I am out rather late to-day, but I am looking for a husband and a home." The vain Moth was about to reply, loftily, "How ugly you are: you have only one colour upon you, and look at me," when he noticed that the Butterfly was looking at him very sternly.

"Who are you," he cried angrily. "Who are you that dare to look at me so?" "I," she replied, "am the butterfly princess, and I am sent out each day by my father to punish all who are vain, proud or selfish, and, if you are vain or selfish ever again, you shall turn into a chrysalis for the rest of your life." The Moth was so frightened at the thought that there and then he made up his mind to be good, and from that day on he was so kind and good that everybody loved him above anybody else.

NAUGHTY BILL.

When Bill was a lad
He was terribly bad,
He worried his parents a lot.
They sent him to bed
Before he'd been fed,
And a jolly good whipping he got.

He never stayed still
Unless he was ill,
Which seemed to his mother a pity.
He hated his pa
And also his ma,
But loved his new pussy called Kitty.

One cold winter's day
He went out to play.
The ice he was told to keep off.
He paid for his sin,
Ice broke, he fell in—
He got a bad cold and a cough.

When Bill grew a man
He made a new plan
And decided good things should be done.
His dad said "Bravo!"
And his mother said "No—"
Body has a more sensible son."

HOW MAX LEARNT A LESSON.

Max was a small grey kitten, with the important name of Maximilian Von Whitewhiskers. This was given to him because of his magnificent white whiskers. One day, his mother took him out into the garden for his first lesson in hunting.

"Now, my son," said Mrs. Puss, "I am going to catch a shrew in this long grass; they are very hard to catch, so you must watch closely to see how I do it."

Max sat very still, with his eyes nearly popping out of his head with excitement. Presently, Mother Puss pounced quickly and brought out a squealing little shrew in her mouth. Max risked poking it with his wee claws, while his Mother said: "Yes, my son, you may play with it, but never, never eat a shrew because it will give you a nasty pain, and so will a starling; but you may eat mice, they are very good indeed, and so are sparrows."

One more good nip, and the poor little shrew lay dead. After his mother had taken him back into the house, Max kept wondering what a shrew really did taste like. He decided to find out, and he quickly sneaked off by himself down the garden. One bite, and off came the shrew's head, a few more crunches and the whole of it was inside Maximilian.

A very satisfied kitten crept back into the house, but his satisfaction did not last long. Very soon he had a most dreadful pain in his poor little tummy. A very sick and sorry Maxie crept close to his mother's warm fur and sorrowfully miaowed: "I wish I'd been obedient, and I'll certainly take your word that starlings are simply horrid to eat."

A MERRY OLD MAN.

He is as old as old can be
His little eye can scarcely see,
He has a beard ten inches long
And always sings a funny song.

He sings all night, he sings all day,
He sings to make us all so gay,
And this is the song he'll always hum—
'Tis fiddle-de-dee and fiddle-de-dum.

He took a walk one sunny day,
And in a field slept in some hay.
A Bumble bee was passing by,
Saw the old man, and stung his eye!

The old man now is blind as can be,
And with neither eye is he able to see,
But this is the song he'll always hum—
'Tis fiddle-de-dee and fiddle-de-dum.

WHIPSNADE.

We left home by car at 4 o'clock on a clear, brisk morning and followed the Roman Watling Street, or, as it is now known, A.5. I noticed, as day began to break, people getting up; first, just a light in the bedrooms, then a few postmen and farm labourers on their way to work. There was very little traffic about, and we kept on the outskirts of the larger towns. The most interesting was Lichfield, whose Cathedral has three spires.

In a little by-lane near Luton, we had a picnic lunch, and arrived at the Zoo at 10 o'clock. The Zoo is unique, not for unusual animals, but because none live in cages. They roam about in large fields or paddocks. The lions and tigers live in wooded dells specially made for them. The chimpanzees, who lived on an island, caused great amusement by trying to dress up in an old jumper and throwing stones at us.

We visited the giraffes, who were much taller than I had expected. Boxer, the baby who was born last Boxing Day, was very pretty. The park is full of deer, wild cattle, zebras, and kangaroos who were carrying their young in pouches. The ugliest animals were the American Bison, who lived in a field on the side of the chalky hill. The polar bears, unused to the warm sun, spent their time playing in their cool pond, but the wolves, who wandered in the pine wood, looked very much at home. Among the numerous wild birds were the flamingoes, whose beautiful white wings were tinged with pink. A thrilling end to the interesting tour round Whipsnade was a ride on an elephant and a camel.

We started the return journey at 3.30 and, driving over the Downs towards Dunstable, we passed the London Gliding Club.

HALF-TERM IN ANGLESEY.

The afternoon was fair, so bright and clear,
On Menai Bridge we slowed, and changed the gear,
And glided swiftly on to Anglesey.

We saw the yachts at anchor in the Straits
As on we travelled through the great white gates,
Along the road where ivy clothed the walls.

As evening fell, we reached Tre-Arddur Bay,
From South Stack's tortuous, narrow, winding way,
Where sea was tossed against the rocks in foam.

The morning came—a disappointing day :
The sky was dark, the sea a churning grey,
And rain and wind came whirling with the tide.

We drove by tufted dune and twisting lane
Till Cemmaes Bay we reached in blinding rain
Where gale-blown sea-birds sheltered on the cliffs.

Next morning found the weather turned again,
The sun was shining—gone the wind and rain,
And back were wide blue skies and shining seas.

So on we went downhill to Benllech Bay,
The sea, so blue and calm, before us lay,
So warm that people bathed and children played.

The stay was ended, half-term week-end done ;
So back we sped before the setting sun,
To home and school until next holidays.

HIGHLAND CATTLE IN SKYE.

Shaggy and brown they stand and gaze
At the Coolins wrapped in a rosy haze,
Wrinkling their noses as the housewife makes
Salted porridge and oaten cakes.

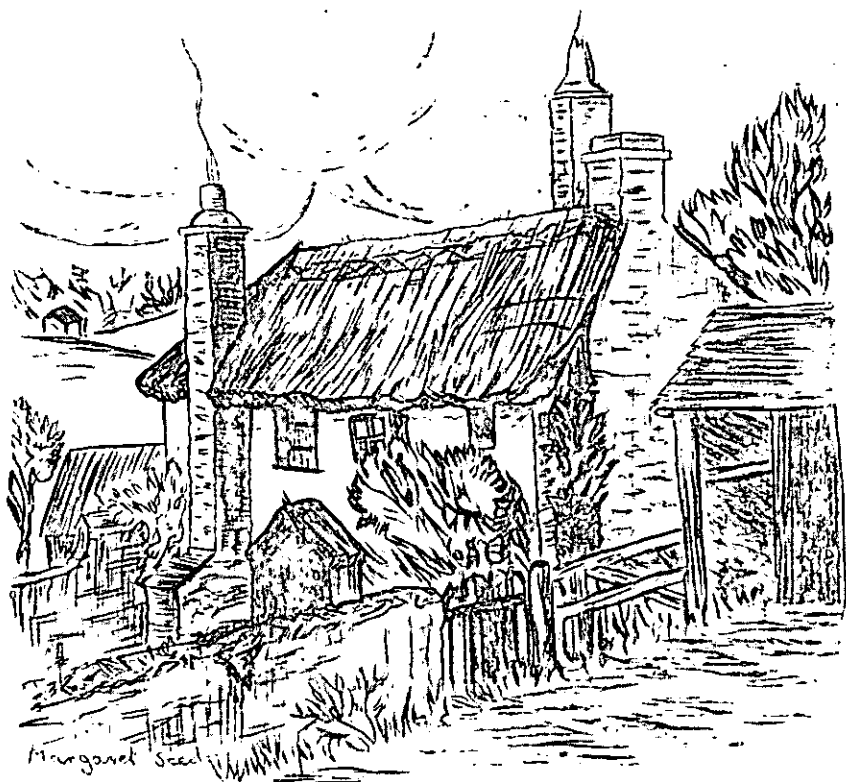

Windy weather, driving rain,
They treat with the same aloof disdain ;
The villages down in the valleys sleep,
The islands their watch with eternity keep.

And, motionless by the murmuring sea,
These creatures, as rugged, proud and free
As the mountain and its lonely height,
Stand and brood in the grey half-light.

PLEASING THOUGHTS.

I have often lain awake on hot, summer nights and thought—thought that I live in Devonshire, in a grey stone house on the southern slopes of Exmoor. I can see myself getting out of the train at the nearest railway halt to our house, to find Daddy and Darkie, the Exmoor pony, waiting for me in the trap. Then I pat Darkie, kiss Daddy and climb up beside him, after piling my luggage into the back. We set off up the hill, between the high Devonshire hedges, overgrown at this time of the year with green bracken and ripening blackberries.

MOORSIDE

At last we top the rise and, on my right hand, I see the rolling, heather-covered moor stretched before me. Here and there the flatness is broken by a clump of wind-blown and stumpy trees and one or two barrows containing the bones of some early Celtic king and his family. Then, to the left and in front of me, the green land slopes down from the road and folds itself into valleys and coombes with cows and sheep grazing placidly by the streams. Daddy points to one of the folds, where a grey stone house with a thatched roof stands surrounded by fir trees. "We're not far off now," says he. And before very long I have to jump down to open the gate which leads into the Moorside Copse, as the land belonging to our house is called. I do not wait for the trap to come through after opening the gate, but run as fast as I can up to the house, where mother is waiting for me with Mickey, the Scottie, and Rhoda, the hound puppy that we are "walking" for the Devon and Somersetshire Hounds. Mother greets me with a hug and a kiss, whilst the dogs try to lick my face.

The first greetings over, I leave my coat and hat in the hall and stroll off, with the dogs at my heels, to see if my cottage is as I left it. The path lies across the soft green grass of the copse and along the side of a noisy stream that comes icy cold from the moor, where in Spring kingcups and irises grow in profusion. After passing three waterfalls in the stream, I come to a wood, and in a clearing in this wood is my cottage. I found it on one of my first exploring expeditions round the estate, a year ago, when we first came to live at Moorside. It was very decrepit and rickety, with rotting stairs and a leaky thatch, but I fell in love with it as soon as I saw it and persuaded Daddy to let me renovate it. Now it has a new thatch with a coating of tar under it, and the stairs have been made stronger by the help of the village carpenter. Inside, too, it is clean and bright with distemper, paint and cretonne curtains.

In this little refuge, which I have named Woodlands, I keep all my hand-work tools, my loom, my fretsaw and my paints, as well as my favourite books. I spend the greater part of my holidays there with my dogs and books. Often I go for long tramps on the moor or in the woods. Other days I spend in front of my large open fire of fragrant pine or apple wood, reading a book and roasting chestnuts in the embers, listening to the music of the stream falling against the stones, and the wind in the trees making the leaves rustle and the old limbs creak like ropes against the side of a ship.

A BARGE IN A LOCK.

On a dull, grey day of February, chancing to pass the locks, I stayed for a few minutes to look at a barge which was going down in one of them.

It was empty, except for a few newly-sawn planks that made the bottom of the barge look indescribably dirty. At either end it was daubed with gaudy reds, blues and greens, looking sadly out of place beside the slimy walls of the lock and the dirty brown water. The chug-chug of the engine went on incessantly, and a thin whisp of smoke came out of the chimney as the barge swayed unsteadily on the swirling water.

Balancing himself on the end of the deck, a boatman idly picked splinters of wood off the rotting gates of the lock, while his comrade turned the handle that sucked out the water. Soon I saw that the man had ceased holding the gates idly and was trying to open them with his fingers. His friend came to his rescue, and, pulling the handle of one of the gates, opened it so that the barge would just slide through.

Marion Walley, Form V Lower.

SPRINGTIME.

The sun shines bright
With fitful light
Between the rushes,
And the thrushes
Are in flight.

Tall poplars seem,
With leaves a gleam,
To be on guard.
Their trunks are scarr'd
With mouldering green.

Now gleams a pond
Through there, beyond
The straggling weeds,
And 'mid the reeds
Sways bracken frond.

The grey scene chills
The senses—till,
Just there below,
Faint sunbeams show
Three daffodils.

Josephine Howe, Form V Lower.

BANK HOLIDAY.

How hot it is ! But I am lying down
Quite unconcerned, although the very grass
Smells warm. The trippers from the distant town
Disturb the hazy quiet as they pass.
They drown the lazy insects' deep-toned droning
As they brush past the dusty privet hedge.

They say : " Eh lad, just look at that there 'ill
Wot we 'ave got to climb in this 'ere 'eat ! "
Then they flop down and think about it, till
The burning sun drives them from their retreat.
They leave their orange peel and silver paper
For anyone who cares to pick them up.

But now, thank goodness, they are gone at last
And all is still, except a silly bee
Who thinks the roses on my frock of vast
Importance and who fusses stupidly
Until I move and then, with angry protest,
He lumbers off in drunken, zig-zag flight.

Frances M. Leach, Form VI Upper.

QUEEN'S SCHOOL ASSOCIATION OF PAST AND PRESENT PUPILS.

The Annual General Meeting took place on Friday,
July 16th, 1937, at 3 p.m.

Miss Nedham was in the Chair. Fifty-nine members were present.

Letters of regret for absence had been received from fifty members.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Election of New Members.

Life Members.—Maureen Adams, Mrs. Brierley (Alice Taylor), Mrs. Fleming (Trudie Adams), Jean Roberts, Cicely Roderick; Eleanor Tiley.

Yearly Members.—Margaret Crombie, Lorna Dominy, Anna Draut, Mrs. Gardner (B. Nevitt-Bennett), Joyce Gardner, Marie Godson, Mary Greenwood, Noreen Higgins, Dorothy Hornby, Joan Howarth, Margaret Humphries, Margaret Kay, Margaret Leach, Pauline Noble, Gwendy Owen, Joan Roberts, Margaret Trant (rejoined), Nancy Varley, Betty Wheeler (rejoined).

Their election was proposed by Mrs. Ayrton, seconded by N. Day, and carried unanimously.

Election of Officers for 1937-38.

It was proposed by Mrs. Lobban, seconded by E. Petters Hughes, and carried unanimously, that the existing officers be asked to serve another year.

Nomination and Election of (5) Committee Members.

No fresh nominations being received, it was proposed by J. Holland Williams, seconded by E. Clemence and carried unanimously, that the existing committee be asked to continue to serve for another year.

The Hon. Treasurer (C. Ayrton) read her Report. Its adoption was proposed by B. Carbutt, seconded by A. Nelson and carried unanimously. A short discussion followed on the advisability of investing the balance £85 12s. 0d. or some portion of it, but it was decided to leave it in the bank for the present.

The Hon. Cot Treasurer (M. Dickson) read her Report, together with a letter of thanks from the Secretary of the Royal Infirmary. The adoption of the Report was proposed by Joan Lewis, seconded by Mrs. Williams (C. Healey) and carried unanimously.

The Hon. Treasurer made an appeal for more regular subscribers.

“Have Mynde.”—A hearty vote of thanks to Miss Hicks for so ably editing the School Magazine was proposed by Miss Nedham and carried with applause.

An Autumn Meeting.—It was decided, on a show of hands, to hold an evening meeting some time during the winter months, the date and arrangements to be left to the Committee.

The Diamond Jubilee.—Miss Nedham mentioned the occurrence of the Queen's School's Diamond Jubilee the next year and suggested that Old Girls would like to take part in whatever was arranged (possibly a dinner) by the School.

Proposed Old Girls' Literary and Dramatic Society.

Miss Nedham suggested that those who wished to take part in a Literary and Dramatic Society (if formed) should give in their names to Doris Edwards.

The meeting concluded with a hearty vote of thanks to Miss Nedham for presiding, proposed by Mrs. Ayrton and carried with applause.

Officers for 1937-38.

Hon Treasurer :—C. Ayrton.

Hon. Secretaries :—K. Day, P. Waymouth.

Hon. Cot Treasurer :—M. Dickson.

Hon. Cot Secretary :—D. Edwards.

Committee :—B. Carbutt, E. Higgins, M. (Miln) Lobban, E. Petters Hughes, S. Trubshaw, P. Pirrie (Form VI).

The afternoon was fine and sunny, and tea was served in the cloisters, after which members took part in a Treasure Hunt.

ASSOCIATION NOTES.

During the past year several Old Girls have won success and honour in their various careers, and hearty congratulations are offered them by their old School.

In July, 1937, Anthea Nelson obtained the London University B.A. Degree in History (General Examination), being placed in the Second Division. She is now taking a Secretarial Training Course in London.

In May, 1938, Eleanor Davies-Jones qualified as a doctor, obtaining the London M.B., B.S. Degree. Her first post is to be that of House Physician at the Royal Free Hospital.

At the Royal Free Hospital, too, Diana Beck has been appointed Surgical Registrar for a fifth year—an unprecedented distinction.

Two Old Girls, Ravis Mead and Kathleen Dobie, have recently qualified at Berridge House, the National Society's Training College for Teachers of Domestic Subjects.

Kathleen Dobie took a 2nd Class Matron-Housekeeper's Certificate and has a post as Assistant House-Mistress at Baronscourt School, Burgess Hill, Sussex.

Rivis Mead is in charge of a new Cookery Centre at Hemsworth under the West Riding of Yorkshire Educational Authorities.

Congratulations and good wishes to the School on attaining its Diamond Jubilee have reached us from all quarters of the globe—British Columbia, Holland, Southern India.

Beatrice Tait, writing from the Lawrence Memorial Royal Military School, Lovedale, Nilgiri Hills, says : " How I wish I could fly over for the week-end ! That is out of the question, but my thoughts at least can and will be with you all, and, along with many other absent members, I will, with love and gratitude, ' Have Mynde ' of the old School and wish her well for the future."

The French Club did not meet in the Autumn Term, but meetings took place on alternate Thursdays throughout the Spring Term, and Jean de la Brète's novel " Mon Oncle et mon Curé " was read.

The Hon. Secretary of the London Branch sends the following Report :—

" First, let it be said that the members feel a true sense of gratitude to Miss Nedham and Miss Day for all the active interest which they show in the doings of the daughter branch.

" Unfortunately, the proposed dinner in November of last year had to be cancelled owing to inadequate numbers. There was a friendly, if small, gathering on March 5th, 1938, at the V.A.D. Ladies' Club, Cavendish Square, when the suggestion of a (more or less) fixed date for meeting was discussed with the idea that London members might try to arrange their engagements so as to fit in. The second Saturday in March was approved by the majority of members."

The Hon. Secretary having come to the (most successful) end of her Medical Course at the Royal Free Hospital, now retires from the office which she has filled with zeal and ungrudging devotion since she assisted in the inauguration of the Branch. Her place will be taken by Irene Naylor, while Elizabeth Murdoch and Ruby James remain as Committee members.

ON MAKING A COLLECTION OF BRASS RUBBINGS.

To a student of history there is no more fascinating subject than that of Monumental Brasses. There are hundreds of these to be found in churches all over England—indeed, in every European country—and they are extraordinarily interesting and important as memorials of ordinary commonplace life, from the time of Edward I up to the Restoration.

The earliest brasses in England are to be found in the church at Stoke D'Abernon, in Surrey. Sir John D'Auberon (1277) and his son, John (1327), are there commemorated in two very large brasses on the floor of the chancel.

After the year 1642, brasses came almost to an end and only about forty more are recorded. (In addition to these, a few have been made during the last few years). Of these, one to Thomas Maddock and his wife (1792) is in Chester Cathedral. Cheshire on the whole is not rich in brasses, though there are two of the fifteenth century, one in St. Peter's Church, Chester, and the other at Wilmslow.

There are many different points of interest about these old brasses. Some people study them from the point of view of costume; others again, for the coats of arms which so many of the better examples bear, either in or about the canopies or at the corners of the stone slabs in which the plates are set. And, again, one enthusiastic brass rubber I know is making a collection of all the animals that so often lie at the feet of the figures. The interesting thing about brasses is that, whatever special subject is being studied, these are not fancy sketches, but actual contemporary portraits. The making of brass rubbings is, therefore, a fascinating hobby and one which grows more and more interesting.

It is not a difficult art; most clergymen are quite willing to allow rubbings to be taken, and the materials used are easy to acquire and very cheap. Also, it gives an added interest, in going to see an old church, to look for a brass which is known to be there. It may be anywhere—on the wall or on the floor; quite possibly, in the latter case, covered by felt or a carpet. In Berkhamstead church, for instance, where there are some very fine fourteenth century brasses, one is completely hidden in the vestry and two are on the floor, actually under some pews.

In conclusion, I would recommend anyone who is interested in history to begin making a collection of brass rubbings. All that is needed is a roll of ceiling paper from a decorator, a black heel-ball from a leather cutter or a cobbler, and permission from the clergyman in whose church is the brass in which you are interested. It is a good plan to take rubbings of any accessible brasses to begin with, whether they are of special interest or not, just for practice. Technique soon improves, and, in a comparatively short time, you will find that you have some interesting and, incidentally, extremely decorative records.

The accompanying illustration is the photograph of a rubbing taken in Aldeburgh Church, Norfolk. It shows the "butterfly" head-dress worn in the latter part of the 15th Century. The actual date of this is 1485.

Eileen (Wright) Vernon.

HOCKEY IN GERMANY.

At Easter, a team which called itself Durham Ladies (for want of a better title), consisting of seven Durham County 1st XI, two Durham 2nd and two Cheshire, went to Germany to play hockey. We were invited to the Hockey Tournament at Wiesbaden for the week-end, and then toured towns near for another four days—playing matches at Wiesbaden against Hörst, Berlin, Klipper, Hamburg and Wiesbaden, and on their own grounds against Hörst, Frankfurt, Heidelberg and Frankenthal.

We played six matches on ash pitches, which are rather like hard tennis courts, one on a pitch partly ash and partly grass—in patches—and one on grass about eight inches high growing on earth like a ploughed field.

The ash was very nice to play on when watered and rolled, but after a couple of matches it was apt to be both very dusty and full of craters. We enjoyed playing against the German teams; they are all extremely keen and play very hard—they also hit very hard, but not very scientifically. We had the queerest mixture of weather. The first two days were very hot—the second day, the heat and the Berlin players were too much for us and we lost 1-4; afterwards we had snow and cold winds, in which we won our next seven matches.

The Germans everywhere were very good to us. We were given hospitality all the time, either in hotels or in families, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the trip, in spite of various contretemps owing to language difficulties. Wherever we went we were taken round and shown all the sights, so much so that we could not find time for shopping !

From Frankenthal we were taken for a long motor trip (complete with accordin in the back seat) on the new autobahn en route for Heidelberg. These roads are marvelous—they cross over or under all other roads, have four carriageways, and junctions only occur about every thirty or forty miles.

Everywhere the interest in hockey was amazing. We had anything from 200-600 spectators, while in England we sometimes have a dozen to watch a county match.

NOTE—

The subscription for Life Membership is 25/-.

The yearly membership subscription is 3/- (sisters 2/6d.), payable on joining and afterwards at the Annual General Meeting in the Summer Term.

† Denotes Life Membership.

* Denotes that subscription for 1937 has not yet been paid.

School badge-brooches can be obtained from the Hon. Secretary. Price 3/-.

Old Girls are reminded that there is an ample stock in hand. It is hoped that this distinctive badge may be worn on all occasions when Old Girls assemble, and that those prevented by distance from attending meetings may like to purchase a brooch as a memento of their School.
