THE CHRONICLE.

At the time of our Diamond Jubilee Celebrations in May, 1938, various references were made to our need of a new gymnasium, and shortly afterwards we began to consider plans and possible sites. The unsettled conditions of the last year have made us realize that any such scheme must be postponed for the present.

The first event of outside interest in the Autumn Term was a Meeting arranged for the Chester Secondary Schools, and held in the Town Hall, on October 24th. Sir Frederick Whyte, K.C.S.I., the Director-General of the English-Speaking Union of the British Empire, was the chief speaker, and he emphasized the importance of friendly intercourse between the English-Speaking countries of the world.

Our Prize Giving was held on Thursday, November 3rd, and we were very grateful to all those who gave us help on that occasion. Mr. Robin, the Rector of Woodchurch, near Birkenhead, came to preach at our Cathedral Service in the morning, and Dr. Owst, the Professor of Education at Cambridge, came from Cambridge to give away the prizes in the afternoon. Professor Owst is an old friend of the School, and as one of His Majesty's Inspectors, he visited us often, and took an interest in our new buildings. He was always a welcome visitor and we were glad to be the means of bringing him back to Chester.

Mayor's Day, November 9th, was of special interest for us this year, and Miss Morris and five of the senior girls had the privilege of representing the School in the Town Hall at the Ceremony of the Making of the Mayor. We are justly proud of our close connection with Chester's first woman Mayor, Mrs. H. F. Brown, and once again offer her our sincere and loyal good wishes.

That same day, November 9th, the French players, Les Comédiens de Paris, paid their annual visit to Chester, and a party of Queen's School girls enjoyed the performance of three short plays given by them at the Royalty Theatre. Our thanks were again due to Mr. Pickup, of the Chester College, for the careful and thorough arrangements made by him.

On the morning of Thursday, December 8th, the greater part of the School went to the Tatler Theatre to see the film of Captain Scott's expedition, and a film showing the flight over Mount Everest. Both were of absorbing interest, and we were grateful to the King's School for asking us to join with them on this occasion, and to the Manager of the Tatler Theatre for his consideration of our special needs.

We ended the Autumn Term with a School Play, "The Knight of the Burning Pestle", performed on December 13th, 14th and 15th. Miss Hicks was our hard-worked producer, but she found many willing and enthusiastic helpers among both mistresses and girls. The proceeds of the Play were paid into the School Fund, of which the balance sheet is shown elsewhere in this magazine.

The Spring of 1939 was a difficult time for many people because of the wide-spread outbreak of influenza. The School did not escape, and it is many years since so large a proportion of the Staff has been away through illness. The girls were rather more fortunate, but amongst them also there were many absentees.

On February 9th we had a visit from members of the Itinerant Theatre Company, under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Van Beers. We greatly admired their performance of "Macbeth", and were interested in their clever use of a small stage.

On February 10th we had an Old Girls' evening party. A successful Beetle Drive was followed by refreshments, and later by various competitions. There were eighty-four people present, and it was a great pleasure to welcome such a large number of Old Girls back to the School.

On Tuesday, February 14th, Miss Perfect came from London and spoke to the senior girls on the subject of Careers in Literature and Art.

The Secondary Schools' Branch of the Chester Musical Festival was held on Saturday, March 18th, and we were indebted to the Mayor for allowing us the use of the Assembly Room at the Town Hall, and for generously providing the members of the Choirs with an excellent tea. Nine Schools took part in the Festival, and we were fortunate in having Mr. Clive Carey as adjudicator.

An informal meeting of the mothers of girls in the main School was held at the School on March 21st. The question of the girls' School uniform was discussed, and it was pleasant to find that the present uniform has been found satisfactory on the whole. The Mayor very kindly presided at the meeting, and gave us all tea afterwards.

The Dean of Chester was again generous in the time and care that he gave to the preparation of our Confirmation candidates. The Confirmation was held by the Bishop of Chester, in the Cathedral, on Wednesday, March 29th.

In the Easter holidays Miss Gee, with the help of Miss Foulkes and Miss Trubshaw, again took a party of girls for a successful walking tour in the Lake District.

On Wednesday, June 7th, we had the great pleasure of a visit from Mrs. Fisher. In a delightfully informal talk she gave us a vivid description of her future home, Fulham Palace, with its great beauty and historic interest, but also its present problems. We have always been conscious of the sympathetic understanding of School life of both the Bishop and Mrs. Fisher, and we cannot but be sad that they are to leave Chester. They will take with them our sincere thanks for all that they have done for us, and our good wishes for their future.

An Inter-House Music Competition was held on Thursday, June 15th, and Miss E. Giles was our cheerful and encouraging adjudicator. The leading choir was provided by Thompson House and the piano section by Westminster House, the winners of the competition as a whole.

At the end of the Summer Term we shall have to say "Good-bye" to Miss Roberts-Brown, who is leaving us to be married, to Miss Wight who is undertaking fresh work in London, and to Miss Sutton, who has only been with us a short time. We give our good wishes to them, and also to our Head Girl, Frances Leach, and to all the others who will be leaving us in July.

M. T. NEDHAM.

IN MEMORIAM.

MRS. HENRY WOODS (ETHEL SKEAT).

A former pupil, herself a scientist, writes as follows:—

"I would like to let you know something of what Mrs. Woods has meant to me. The measure of joy, the realisation of beauty, the understanding of Nature that makes up so much in my life, I owe entirely to her. I know that I can never be grateful enough for all that she taught me; taught in such a way that it was more a giving of herself and her experiences than what might be termed a lesson. So vividly did she instil into me the love of 'Mother-Earth' during her Geology lessons, that, whenever I go on my travels in this country or abroad, my first thought has always been, and still is, 'What rock is this place built upon? And what is below that?' If I have not been able to solve the problem myself, I have always said: 'I will ask Mrs. Woods, she'll know', and immediately ceased to worry. My faith in her was implicit. I have always felt that she was there to appeal to when in difficulties, and that that appeal would never be made in vain. This thought gave me wonderful courage, especially in my early teaching days when I felt very much alone in a large world.

I shall never forget her infinite patience and accuracy and scorn of everything that was not the best; and her example has ever been before me in all my work, scientific, medical and in everyday things at home, that I have ever done. And, added to her great wealth of knowledge about which she was so humble, was her great kindness and thought for others."

An Old Girl of the Queen's School

ALDERMAN DAVIES-JONES.

It is with great regret that we record the death of Alderman Thomas Davies-Jones, on March 13th. As a parent and later, as a member of the Governing Body of the Queen's School, he always displayed the keenest interest in its activities, and he was a familiar figure at many School functions. For seven years he was a member of the Chester City Council, where he served on many committees, and in 1935 he became Mayor. He was deeply interested in many aspects of city life, but he was also a keen supporter of the Cheshire Agricultural Society and he had a wide knowledge of music. He will be greatly missed by the many recipients of his kindness and we offer our sincere sympathy to Mrs. Davies-Jones and Dr. Eleanor Davies-Jones, a former head-girl of the school.

L.E.P.J.

ALDERMAN GEORGE BARLOW.

Within ten days of the death of Mr. T. Davies-Jones, the Queen's School was shocked to learn of the death of another member of its Governing Body, Alderman George Barlow, on March 22nd. He, too, had been connected with the School for many years, as parent and as Governor, but perhaps he was best known for his long period of service to the city, which earned for him the title of "Father" of the Council. His public offices were many and in 1937 he became Mayor. He will be much missed in almost every aspect of city life.

V. ELIZABETH BATE.

Betty Bate, aged ten, a pupil of the Queen's School, died on March 22nd, 1939, as the result of a road accident.

ANNE M. RHODES.

Anne Rhodes, aged nine, a pupil of the Queen's School, died on June 7th, 1939, also as the result of a road accident.

GAMES, 1938—1939.

Tennis, 1st VI.

Barbara Gerrard. Her constant practice produced a marked improvement in her game. Her service and freehand drive were powerful, net play was determined but not always accurate. Her backhand drive still needs practice. On the whole she played a very thoughtful and determined game.

Margaret Gerrard. She was a steady player with strong drives, her net play was particularly reliable. When she has learnt to speed up her foot work she will play a very good game.

Margaret Pirrie. A player whose obvious concentration and effort made her a most encouraging partner. Net play and forehand drives were good but her backhand was very erratic at the beginning of the season.

Frances Leach. She had good well placed forehand drives and a reliable backhand. Her net play was good and she was very quick in moving about the court and supporting her partner. With more practice her volleying will be very good. Her advice and encouragement as Captain were helpful to the rest of the team (Barbara Gerrard).

Barbara Robinson. Her strong point was her net play; her service, when accurate, was also difficult to return. Forehand drives were well placed, but backhands were not always successful.

Nancy Adam. She played a very steady game. Although her individual strokes were not strong she could be relied upon to return the ball.

Frances M. Leach (Captain).

Barbara and Margaret Gerrard gained their colours.

The House Cup was won by Westminster.

HOCKEY.

Autumn Term, 1938.

The general standard of play throughout the school would be greatly improved if only every girl realized that hockey cannot be successful when played "comfortably". The game would become quicker and far more exciting if each player put twice as much energy into her game and used her brain to outwit her opponents by doing the unexpected.

Defence play was better than forward play. Forwards must learn to increase their speed when fielding the ball. Many more goals would be scored if forwards shot as soon as they were in the circle.

Remove B showed great promise in stickwork and general feeling for the game, but they must increase their speed.

Upper IV B. have the necessary speed, but will not make successful players until they combine their speed with accurate stickwork.

There are a number of players in Upper IV A. who can easily reach 1st XI standard, but they will not do so, unless they make a great effort to be quick and controlled.

Lower IV A. and B. have a number of promising players. In most cases their game needs more energy and they must now learn to carry on the points of coaching from one game to the next, instead of being told the same thing every time.

The 1st XI were not very successful in their matches, mainly because nearly every player lacked the two essentials of a team hockey player: speed and stickwork.

Frances Leach was an untiring player with speed and good stickwork. Elspeth Stalker played well in goal.

Barbara Robinson was the only forward who could be considered "dangerous" to the other side.

E. Stalker, N. Broster and M. Thompson gained their colours.

The Senior House Cup was won by Hastings.

Only two of the Junior matches were played, because of rain.

C.M.B.

LACROSSE.

Spring Term, 1939.

Although a great deal of effort is still required by every player to improve the School Lacrosse generally, there was a marked improvement towards the end of the term after each player learnt the value of picking up the ball neatly and without slackening speed.

No player can really feel that she will be of great value to either her House or School team unless she has completely mastered her stickwork by the time she reaches I.V, and this can easily be achieved if every player realises that the time given for practice is the chance for her to do her bit towards making both her House and School team efficient.

Form III and the Removes deserve special praise for the way they practised with such good spirits for three quarters of the term before attempting to play a game. I am sure that their efforts were rewarded when they found how exciting a game of Lacrosse can be when the ball is kept moving quickly in the air.

Attack play on the whole was better than defence play. The golden rule for all defence players, especially those who are not quick at intercepting, is to keep between your opponent and the goal into which she is shooting.

Frances Leach was the only member of the 1st XII whose stickwork and speed proved her to be a very good Lacrosse player.

All the other members, although their stickwork and speed did not always reach a high enough standard, showed an extremely good spirit, especially when playing a losing game.

C. Hullah and I. Barton gained their colours.

The Senior House Cup was won by Thompson.

No Junior House matches were played.

Frances Leach has been School Games Captain this year. Her stickwork, energy and determination in all her games has been an excellent example to the rest of the team. We shall all be very sorry to lose her at the end of this term.

MUSIC.

The Voluntary Choir with its 65-70 members has had another good year's work. There was great competition, when not more than 40 girls had to be chosen to sing in the Chester Musical Festival (Secondary School Section—non-competitive), on March 18th, but the loyal outlook of the less fortunate ones made the task of selecting an enjoyable one. Mr. Clive Carey was the Adjudicator and we were grateful to him for a delightful criticism.

The Songs were:—

There is sweet music—Bainton.

Daybreak—Sampson.

Own Choice: Lullaby—Walford Davies.

There were ten choirs and one orchestra.

The Mayor (Mrs. H. F. Brown) kindly gave tea to all the Festival Singers, and it was evident that the afternoon was greatly enjoyed by everyone there.

This term we are having an Inter-House Music Competition. Each House has its own Conductor and Pianist, and there is evidence of much interest, and useful work being done.

The Piano Section is divided into three grades:

Junior—Form 1—III.

Intermediate—RB—IVLA.

Senior—IV Up. B—VI.

The last two groups are preparing their work without help.

THE LITERARY SOCIETY.

A meeting was held in the Autumn Term at which, as a last minute choice, an amusing play by Ian Hay and P. G. Wodehouse, called Baa, Baa Black Sheep, was read. In the Spring Term V. Upper were invited to take part in two debates, the motions being that Capital Punishment should be abolished, and that Shakespeare would die were it not for the admiration of schools and colleges. The first motion was carried by 11 votes to 9. For the second motion the votes on both sides were equal.

Barbara Phelps (Secretary).

THE DRAMATIC SOCIETY.

The Dramatic Society has not, as a society, had a very active year, since practically all its talent was needed for the school play.

Although we shall be saying 'good bye' to many of our supporters, any new members from Forms V.Lr.—VI, will be welcomed next year, when we hope to produce some more plays.

THE KNIGHT OF THE BURNING PESTLE.

The end of the Christmas term, 1938, saw the production, by the school, of Beaumont and Fletcher's play 'The Knight of the Burning Pestle'. This 17th Century burlesque made a stimulating and welcome change from the ordinary run of school plays, and, as a member of the audience it is my pleasant privilege to write a tribute to those who took part in it, and to their producer, Miss Hicks.

The choice was, I think, a bold and ambitious one. Not at all an easy play to act, for the plot is slender and farcical, and the dialogue of the period difficult to follow if hurried, or, on the contrary, dragged. As it was, however, there was not a dull moment, and the play went with a swing and a sparkle that made a success of it from first to last.

The thing that struck one most was how well the parts were cast. The contrast between robust and burly Jasper and his effeminate rival Humphrey was perfect, and the citizen and his wife were equally well chosen. The citizen's wife, in particular interpreted her part to the life, and fairly carried the play along with her exuberance and officiousness.

How intensely irritating to the actors of that time must have been the practice of 'seats on the stage' which is made the subject of burlesque in this play! By paying a bit extra one was entitled to sit right on top of the wretched players, and criticise and interrupt the performance to one's heart's content. However, the resentment felt by the two young playwrights which found vent in this burlesque has provided a good laugh for subsequent playgoers,—and, further, has given us an interesting glimpse of the stage of that period.

The grocer's apprentice, Ralph, deserves special praise for his rendering of a long and difficult part. Now and then we lost a few words of his more lengthy speeches, but for the most part he spoke well and clearly, and had quite caught the 'Knight's' quixotic character.

Luce, looked, and was, charming in her flowered gown with its overdress of green linen; and indeed all the dresses made attractive colour on the stage, though the flat caps of some of the men were a little earlier in date than the play, which was written in 1610—11.

Venturewell was good as the grey-bearded 'heavy father' of Luce. So, too, was the jovial but rather dreadful old reprobate Charles. Merrythought, whose irrepressible carolling at each appearance—incidentally a most trying thing to do unaccompanied, for which I respectfully doff my hat to him—is barely suppressed even when he is confronted with the sinister black pall which is supposed to cover the corpse of his son Jasper! Perhaps his fondness for the bottle, of which his nose gives ample evidence, may be excused by the shrewishness of Mistress Merrythought, his wife.

Space does not allow one to mention every character in the piece, (though the Knight's squire and dwarf must have a word of praise to themselves for their clear, well-spoken little speeches), but one may sum up by saying that the whole cast co-operated to make this 17th Century play a most successful performance and one which the audience thoroughly enjoyed.

FROM THE DIARY OF RALPH, AN APPRENTICE.

Tuesday.

My master hath told me that on Thursday he is resolved to carry his mistress to the play: "And," quoth he: "If thou art a good boy and help thy mistress well, thou shalt go with us and be her page". For indeed, when outside his shop, my master wishes to appear like a rich lord or knight. Even now he is getting out his embroidered doublet and brown cloak lined with orange from the big oak chest in which he keeps his finery. They are the clothes in which he was wed, so my mistress tells me, and they fitted him well when he was young and lusty. Now, alas, his paunch hath spread so that my mistress hath perforce to slit the back to make room for it. It is indeed fortunate that he hath so fine a cloak to cover up the tear.

Having put up the shutters for the night, I will betake me to Milk Street to acquaint Susan with my fortune. I feel she will be cast down, for I have promised to carry her to London Bridge to watch the crows pick out the eyes of the heads on the poles. But the chance of going to the play with my master is a chance not to be sneezed at, and not for all the beautiful damsels in the world would I miss it.

Wednesday.

Today I finished 'Palmerin of England' which I have kept behind the counter to read when trade is slack and my master's back is turned. It is, I think, a most inspiring tale. How glorious it would be to have a squire and dwarf and wander over the world killing giants and rescuing distressed damsels from dragons. 'Slid I am resolved on it! When I am grown up I shall be a knight! I am certain that master Goodoby, the cobbler, would lend me his horse, and the two boys next door can be my squire and my dwarf. I must be a grocer for a while, because my master would be sore offended an I did not. But when I have found him another apprentice I will indeed take my fortune on the road with my squire and dwarf. Methinks I will be called Sir Bevis the Bold.

I went again to see Susan, taking with me a silver brooch that was my mother's. She was wild with delight to have it and pinned it on her stomacher, giving me in return a knot of ribbons from her best attire which I paid for—with a kiss! Truly I am a most dashing knight.

Thursday.

What a day it has been! We set out, my master in his doublet and cloak, my mistress in a new gown and myself in my new tunic with the puffed sleeves and clean white hose. We arrived early and stood in the front of the pit where I saw a good number of merchants and their wives. On the stage there were dashing youths with most costly bejewelled doublets. Indeed when I grow up I shall wear such clothes.

My master, I could see, was dissatisfied with the title of the play 'The London Merchant' and when the first boy came out and began to speak he leapt on to the stage and denounced the play. My mistress joined in the argument from below and I tried to quiet her, thinking it unseemly for a woman to raise her voice in public. But she would have none of me and I had to help her on to the stage to talk with the youth. They wanted a play about a grocer errant, and because there was no boy to play his part they called me up to do it!

I went behind the scenes of the stage amongst the youths dressed as women and merchants and chose two little boys to be my squire and dwarf. I did many brave things with them, so many that I almost lost count. I recall that I was called the Knight of the Burning Pestle and my emblem was the golden pestle of Grocer's Hall. I rescued a damsel and her squire from giants, searched for her lost jewels, slept at the castle of a knight who was methinks deranged in mind for he insisted that I should pay him. And indeed it was fortunate that my master was there for I had no money. Then I fought with a giant Barbarossa and beat him sore, though I was too merciful to kill him. I then visited a Moldavian princess and gave her money to buy pins. She fell in love with me and would fain have had me marry her, but I remain true to Susan for ever.

After this my master sent word for me to go out and be a May Lord and say my speech. 'Twas well that I had still in my head the lines that I had conned for last May when I had fain been chosen for the real May Lord.

The last of my exploits was to drill the train bands as their Captain, though methinks the men given to me as soldiers tried to mock me. They were a sorry lot indeed and knew not the right end of a musket nor how to respond to commands. I drilled them well, though and inspired them with a stirring oration, exhorting them to fight for Saint George. It is such captains that are wanted these days, though not many realize it.

Then when the play was nearly over my mistress insisted that my part should end with my death, so out I went on to the stage, pale and still, with a forked arrow, through my head. I delivered a fine speech showing how my life had been spent in gallantry, and how I had died for the love of Susan, my love.

Methinks that when I grow up I will not be a knight, I will be an actor.

A BALLAD OF A DAMSEL IN DISTRESS.

In thirteen hundred and fifty-eight,
 (That is my wonderful story's date).
 A fat Knight lived in a castle grim;
 His daughter Rowena lived with him.
 The old Knight was ugly, as ugly as sin,
 And daily consumed sixty barrels of gin.
 The maiden was perfect in every degree;
 A daintier damsel you'd ne'er wish to see.
 One day the old Knight said to the young girl:
 "I want you to marry Sir Jonathan Churl".

"No, no, dearest Papa!" the maiden she cried.
 "I don't love Sir Johnny, nor could if I tried".
 "We'll see", said her father in accents of wrath.
 "I know you young hussy, you love that Sir Garth".
 He locked the poor lady in tower number one;
 The wicked old scoundrel he thought it was fun.
 "Oh, help", cried the maiden in greatest lament,
 "Papa won't release me unless I relent".
 Sir Garth heard Rowena and jumped on his horse.
 He cried, "To the castle! I'll make that my course".
 He arrived at the castle and sprang to the ground.
 "It's bolted and locked", he muttered and frowned.
 He said to himself, "I hope I'm in time,
 Up the green ivy I quickly will climb".
 He rescued the lady and kissed her fair face;
 She felt safe and happy in his fond embrace.
 But just as he placed the girl on his steed
 Her father came rushing towards them with speed.
 "I've caught you", he cried and drew out his sword.
 "You'll never this night get over the Ford".
 Sir Garth he was brave and he set on the Knight;
 The valley rang with the sound of their fight.
 At last the old Knight cried, "Have mercy on me
 You can marry Rowena, for you've set her free".
 Sir Garth and Rowena were married mid laughter;
 'Tis said they lived happy for ever and after.

EVACUATION IN THE EARLY NINETEENTH CENTURY.

In these days, when we are all making preparations in case of war, and evacuation schemes are very much in the foreground, it is interesting to read the scheme of evacuation set out by my great, great-grandfather for his family. They were living at Elswick Hall, Northumberland, and in case of a French landing during his absence with his regiment, my great, great-grandfather left these directions with his wife.

They were written in about 1804.

"As soon as the enemy is known for a certainty to be off the coast, James to have in readiness two carts and two horses, one for each cart,—one cart to carry the family, the other to carry chest of papers, plate and other articles of value which can easily be removed. Family, etc. not to set off (though to be always prepared to do so) till they have certain information of the enemy having made good their landing, and are advancing into the country. And when that is even the case Thomas Cutter will still remain in the house till the enemy reaches Newcastle. He may then quit it and ride to the place where the family have already retreated to, as he will have the black mare left for that purpose. As soon as James has arrived at the place of retreat he will return to Elswick again and carry off the corn (if an order is issued by the General commanding the District to that purport). If not, he may load with the most valuable goods, paintings, etc. This he may do so long as he can make good his retreat again into the country. One gun to go with the luggage, the other to be left with Thomas Cutter, who will bring it with him when he retreats. Dogs to go with the carts. (Stamfordham is to be the place of retreat)."

AID FOR THE FIRST AIDER.

In spite of the fact that I've tried hard to learn
What to do for a break or apply for a burn,
That I've struggled with names of the bones and the veins
Till the thought of my test nearly fractured my brains,
Now I'm told all I need to remember en bloc
Is "Send for the doctor, treat patient for shock."

I know how to tell if the fracture's impacted,
And whether it's measles or mumps he's contracted;
I know how many minims there are in a drachm,
But authority has it that for an exam.
The two vital things that my memory must stock
Are, "Send for the doctor, treat patient for shock".

S.O.S. in Home Nursing means "si opus sit",
And medicine is given "quantum sufficit"
Pilulae for children are hidden in jam
But all this is useless for my next exam.
When the necessary knowledge is built on the rock
Of "Send for the doctor, treat patient for shock".

The function I've learnt of each separate muscle
And all the constituents in a corpuscle.
I know all the signs of acute septicaemia,
And that liver is good for pernicious anaemia,
But all to no purpose. My brain like a clock
Ticks, "Send for the doctor, treat patient for shock."

MONKEY AT LARGE.

A beast had escaped in the night,
 The guards didn't know what to do,
 All Chester came out for the sight,
 King Kong had escaped from the Zoo!
 A search-party searched, but in vain,
 Detectives on trail made a queue,
 Folk trembled, and trembled again,—
 King Kong had escaped from the Zoo!
 That day when Miss Whittam came home,
 A shadowy shape came in view,
 Went upstairs; so she sprang for the phone,
 "King Kong has escaped from the Zoo!"
 Bands of men, armed with nets, came because
 They were told that, without more ado,
 They must catch the fierce monkey, which was
 King Kong, who'd escaped from the Zoo!
 Miss Whittam saw Kong the next day,
 He looked tiny and terrified too;
 Behind bars, his sad eyes seemed to say
 "King Kong once escaped from the Zoo!"

A PET.

Sleepy little poodle,
 Lying on the mat,
 Enjoying all the sunshine,
 Not noticing the cat.
 Time for tea my darling,
 Before it gets too cold.
 I fear the walk has been too long,
 For my small fellow bold.
 Why have you not finished
 And left a nice clean plate?
 You've not had very much my dear,
 It's really getting late.
 You ought to be asleep now,
 Although you had no tea.
 I know the dog next door is up,
 But he's grown-up you see.
 You say the nights are cold, dear.
 I'll make more warm your bed.
 There'll be a bone for you next day;
 Now rest your weary head.

TUNES.

I hate the tunes they play at balls,
In stuffy rooms and noisy halls,
With lazy couples sliding past,
To waltz or foxtrot, slow or fast.

But I love best the tunes of elves,
Those played at night in woodland dells;
A mossy couch to take your ease,
And honey from the bumble bees.

I like the tunes of fairies too,
Those played at midnight midst the dew,
With fairies flitting to and fro,
And ne'er a sign of grief or woe.

And sometimes, when the day is o'er
When shining wavelets kiss the shore
I sit beneath the golden moon,
And hear the mermaids play their tune.

THE NURSERY SCHOOL.

In the Spring Term, Miss Hicks kindly took four of Form IV. Upper A, to the Nursery School. The girls were chosen by shuffling slips of paper. What a thrill to find that we were two of the lucky ones.

The great day arrived at last. We found ourselves on the bus, each carrying a scrap book, which the IV. Upper A girls had made from Christmas cards, for the children. When we arrived Miss Morgan showed us over the school. First we saw the tiny cloakrooms where the children go when they arrive, to take off their hats and coats and put on overalls. Miss Morgan told us that the children would scream if their parents or a sister tried to put the wrong overall on them. Over their pegs and on their various belongings they had pictures of dogs, cats, or sheep or some other animal, instead of numbers or names. Next we saw the medical room where each child is examined once a fortnight, by a visiting doctor.

In the playroom the children were sitting at small tables waiting for some milk before going home. Three or four of the children were giving out cups for the milk. Then the children joined Miss Morgan in singing grace, and were not the least bit interested in us. After grace, they had their milk. We were very much amused when one of the younger ones spilt some milk and a little boy jumped up, brought a mop, twice as big as himself, and wiped it up. On the far side of the play room Miss Morgan opened a cupboard door and showed us dozens of little camp beds. The beds are light enough for the children to lift them, and after dinner each child gets one out, and sleeps for about two hours. Next we walked through into another room, where we saw six miniature wash basins and one larger one. We were told that the larger one was where the children are bathed when they get very dirty. We noticed that the south side of the building was mostly glass, so that the children got the full advantage of the sun. In the summer they are able to play outside, where there is a sand pit, a paddling pool and many toys, such as a jungle gym. We noticed that the children were beginning to go home as it was 4 o'clock, so we thought we had better go too. Returning to Miss Morgan's room, we each signed our names in the Visitors' Book, thanked Miss Morgan, said good-bye, and went home.

A SEWING BEE.

Binding for an apron, ribbon for a bib,
Here a frill, there a tuck, now a tiny rib.
Seven dwarfs and Mickey Mouse
On an apron small,
Sir Donald Duck and Snow White's house,
There must be one for all.

So sewing once a week (with tea and buns at four)
Of overalls and other things we soon had quite a store.
In boxes large we sent them off to all our tiny friends.
In play we hope they'll not be rough
Or 'twill be time for mends!

A GOLD FISH.

I am a Goldfish. I live in a pond, with lots of other fishes.
My home is in the middle of the pond. One day, a big king-fisher came along, and I thought that I was going to be eaten up, but I was not. That was a good thing.

THE PET LAMB.

One day in the Spring
When I went out,
I met a pet lamb
That was jumping about.

The wind was blowing,
The sun was bright,
So I played with the lamb
Till the house was in sight.

MY GARDEN.

I have a little garden,
Made in a wooden box.
I can grow the tiny flowers
But not hollyhocks.

I have a little path of moss,
And rock plants white and pink,
A row of little sycamores,
And a pool for birds to drink.

I have a little rockery,
With violets very sweet,
My box is very small,
But my garden very neat.

THE PRINCESS'S ARITHMETIC LESSON.

The Princess Isabella was sulky. Her parents had gone to an exhibition. She was having an arithmetic lesson with her governess.

"Bother," she said, "Why did anyone ever invent arithmetic?"

"Now Your Highness, that is the third time that you have asked me that question this morning; and I'm sure I don't know", her governess said crossly.

"Well! I've finished my sum. Is it right?"

"Now let me see, six two's are twelve, and five are——. No, Your Highness, how many times have I told you that twelve and five are not fifteen! No, it is not right! Do it again".

"Sha'n't do it again! I want to go out and play." "All right, you can go out. I don't know what I shall tell your royal father and mother when they come in". But the Princess was half-way down the palace stairs. You see no one could refuse her anything, as she was a princess.

The King and Queen came in after tea. "Dear! Dear!" said the King. "What is this I hear about your arithmetic? You don't do your sums?"

"Oh! They're much too hard for me, really they are. What have you brought for me from the exhibition?" "Really, my de" began the Queen. "This", said the King, producing an oblong box. When the Princess opened it there was a doll inside.

"How lovely, Daddy!" cried the Princess in delight. "Look, it says its tables if you press that button, and if you press that one it repeats French verbs".

"Then I won't have to have a governess! How nice! I will begin now". She pressed one of the buttons.

"Six one's are six", began the doll. "I will try and say my tables quicker than the doll. That will be nice", cried the Princess, jumping about.

"I thought that would do it", said the King.

And it did!

SCHOOL.

The sky is blue,
The tree is green,
And in my view
The thrushes preen.
It seems such a pity
To have to sit still;
I wish I was witty
And my paper could fill.

THE TUCK SHOP.

There is a shop in Watgate Row
To which all children love to go;
There is an old lady at the door,
I seem to love her more and more;
She sells lollipops, humbugs, bull's eyes,
For which all children think she is wise.

THE RUBY RING.

One day I saw a little elf,
'Twas dressed in green and red,
He wore a pretty little frock,
And a cap upon his head.

I saw him in the garden,
 Sitting on the ground,
 And suddenly I said to him,
 "Oh! look what I have found".

For, underneath an ivy leaf
 Was a tiny ruby ring,
 I showed it to the little elf,
 Who began at once to sing.

When he had finished his song, he said,
 "This ring belongs to the Queen,
 She lost it seventeen years ago,
 Since then it has ne'er been seen".

Then he took me to the Fairy Queen,
 Who said, "My precious ring!
 But as I've got another now,
 YOU may have the thing!"

I rode home on a big white swan,
 Whose beak was made of gold,
 I am very fond of my ruby ring,
 Not for anything shall it be sold!

ROBIN GOES A-HUNTING.

Oh Robin of the Greenwood
 And all his merry men,
 One day went out a-hunting,
 A-hunting in the glen.

When Robin bent his bow,
 And aimed a careful shot,
 He took his game unto the oak
 And put it in the pot.

When all the merry men came home
 To see how much they'd caught,
 They had a merry supper,
 And then they found they'd nought!

SPRING.

Have you heard the birds to-day?
 Listen and you'll hear them say
 Spring, Spring, Spring,
 Has come, Has come,
 Has come.

Buds are bursting in the trees,
 Can you hear the moaning breeze?
 Spring, Spring, Spring,
 Has come, Has come,
 Has come.

The lambs are frisking round their dams
 Because they are such happy lambs;
 Spring, Spring, Spring,
 Has come, Has come,
 Has come.

ROUEN.

As I walk down the stone steps from the front door into the garden, I can feel the heat through my sandals. The sun is blazing down on to the flowers, and the air is filled with the scent of roses.

At the end of the garden there is a lilac hedge, over which I can see the city of Rouen. A heat mist is hanging over it, and there is no disturbing noise or movement. On this side of the Seine is the ancient part of Rouen. The great cathedral tower and spire shine in the sun. The colours of stained glass windows glow in the brilliant light. The wide, open squares contrast strangely with the clusters of small dirty houses.

Beyond all this the river flows, smoothly—without energy—as though it, too, feels the overpowering heat. A yacht, flying the Union Jack, glides up the river. Flat-bottomed cargo carriers salute one another with sirens as they pass. Beyond the Seine is Modern Rouen with its many factories, emitting black smoke that dulls the blueness of the sky. To the right the river turns and gradually disappears—on its way to the sea.

Joan Lewis (Form V. Upper).

THE STORM.

The wind howls,
 The thunder roars,
 The lightning flashes,
 The rain pours.
 The sky is grey
 With eerie light;
 The trees bend low
 Under the wild wind's might.
 The birds are scared,
 They fly from sight,
 As slowly the greyiness
 Turns to night.

Margery Davenport (Form IV. Lower A.).

TREES.

Leaves, yellow, brown, and red,
 Are floating in the air.
 The trees, their colours shed,
 Look all forlorn and bare.

They all dream of the days
 When they were young and green.
 They think, in a faint haze,
 How fair they must have been.

But now, without Spring's gown,
 They stand, again forgotten;
 Some branches withered down,
 And some all weak and rotten.

But, when Spring comes again,
 They'll all don new green coats,
 In field and country lane,
 And by the river boats.

Helena White (Form III.).

BIRDS IN OUR GARDEN.

I'm sitting in the garden,
 And nobody is near
 Except the birds around me;
 Their songs I love to hear.

A thrush, up in the pear-tree,
 Is singing loud and clear,
 It's "Pretty Dick" he's saying,
 He sings it without fear.

A sparrow, on the pathway,
 Is pecking at some bread,
 And while he is still eating
 Up comes a robin red.

A blackbird now is singing,
 And proud he well may be,
 For in a nest close by here
 He has a family.

EVENING IN THE PINE WOOD.

Above the crests of the plumed pines,
The sky with pale, blue radiance shines,
Soft with the glow of hidden light,
Cut by the arcs of swallows' flight.

I smell the scent of my pine-wood fire;
The hazy smoke drifts lazily higher
In idle puffs, which melt away
In the mists that shroud the dying day.

The tang of the pine trees, clear and strong,
Drenches the air, and wafts along
The bank of the lake, where only stir
The rustling grass, and the sighing fir.

IN THE LAKE DISTRICT.

At about nine o'clock on the morning of Monday, April 24th, people on or near platform 13 at Chester Station may have noticed a number of girls in hiking apparel gathered near the waiting train, chattering excitedly, and joyfully greeting new-comers. A few minutes later they clambered into their reserved compartments, were borne away northwards—and consequently forgotten. But to the members of the party those moments were thrilling, for the Lake District holiday, more generally termed the Hike, had really begun.

The journey was the greatest fun, and we arrived at Windermere in high spirits, feeling very energetic. We came on Thorney How, the hostel, unexpectedly—a low, white-washed building with a comfortable air about it. At bedtime hurricane lamps and candles lit the corridors and rooms and cast flickering shadows on the low ceilings. After a while we settled down to sleep undisturbed.

"Undisturbed" did someone say? Well, perhaps it was true for one or two of us, but what with beds being re-made in the middle of the night, and articles dropping off top bunks and sounding like tons of bricks, and bangings on the wall as protests from the men next door, and boots being thrown up to the ceiling as protests from the men below, and caustic comments at breakfast next morning about "feminine voices"—the consensus of opinion did not seem to indicate that the correct word was "undisturbed".

Next morning we decided, in spite of the warnings from other hostellers about hailstorms and obscure paths, to climb Helvellyn. We had no packs, for we were to stay another night at Grasmere, and we embarked on our climb light-heartedly. The going was hard and steep, and we rested often; our usually voluble tongues were stilled. We did remark, however, that we should like to paddle in Grisedale Tarn when we got to it—we were beginners, you remember. Quite suddenly we found ourselves looking down on the Tarn. We stared at it in some dismay, for it looked deep and forbidding. It was hemmed in by hills, the sky was overcast, the wind bitterly cold, and we were tremendously grateful for the chocolate that was handed round. Then we decided to press on to keep warm, descended the hillside, crossed round by the Tarn, and began the difficult zig-zag track up Dollywaggon. Half-way up we stopped for lunch. The sunshine was fitful, and we were not really surprised when the sky darkened and it began to hail very heavily. The scene, beautiful if bleak, was completely blotted out by this white screen; and, although Miss Trubshaw bravely shielded us with her great black cloak, we must have looked very forlorn.

When we had completed this zig-zag track, we found the next stage easier, for the turf, although covered with snow which had fallen the previous night, was springy and easy to walk on. Our spirits were rising again now, and our tongues were kept busy in arguing whether we were there or not. The view from the summit repaid all our efforts. We could see almost the whole of the Lake District—Grange in the south, many of the lakes and even, over the sea in the north, the coast of Scotland, dim in the distant haze. It was very lovely.

The next day we had to leave Grasmere, for we were to walk that day to Longthwaite Youth Hostel, in Borrowdale. This walk through bog was great fun. We kept in single file at first, stretching a long way through the pass, for we were attempting to pick out dry patches. Soon, with the exception of Miss Trubshaw, who, with great determination, kept her shoes and socks completely dry for the whole distance, we tired of the more delicate stepping which usually ended in minor disasters, and happily paddled for the rest of the way, heedless (when we got used to them) of wet feet and the coldness thereof.

At the hostel, a new wooden one looking like a Canadian log cabin, we were all put together in one enormous dormitory where we should sleep with the gurgle of a stream in our ears as well as the gurgles and snores from the other occupants of the room. Downstairs there was a large dining-common-room, the scene of nightly sing-songs organised by Conrad, the young catering warden. After breakfast we were given a choice of jobs before we set out walking. Some swept; others washed up, while a few prepared lunches. Potatoes had to be peeled, so four of us sat in a semi-circle and rolled up our sleeves. The warden brought the pan—a great cauldron. When it was about quarter full, he looked at the potatoes, then at us, and threw them out of the back door. Dejectedly, we appointed Cynthia as professional cutter-up (each potato to be cut into four pieces) and we began peeling as hard as we could. We were rewarded by a pile of clean well-peeled potatoes. One of us still bears on her finger the scar of a blister.

We had to bid a regretful goodbye to Borrowdale. We walked to Keswick by way of Watendlath, an easy walk and a very beautiful one. We saw Judith Paris' home, and lunched near the Devil's Punch Bowl, talking about everything and nothing; and among other things we learnt that Madeleine Carroll, in spite of her good looks, had once been a school-mistress.

The next day we arrived back in Chester, tanned by wind and sun, said goodbye to our friends, and fervently thanked Miss Foulkes and Miss Trubshaw, and above all Miss Gee, who had spent so many hours beforehand arranging the holiday, and most evenings during it in mathematical calculations about the price of breakfast and sandwiches. Then we turned homewards, mostly by car or bus, while one energetic person, still with the hiking fever in her blood, walked home the whole five miles.

ASSOCIATION NOTES.

Diana Beck has once more brought honour to the School through the honour done to herself. She was invited to become a member of the Staff—the only woman member—of the Nuffield Department of Neuro-Surgery under Professor Cairns, at Oxford and took up her residence there at the end of 1938.

She is the first woman to undertake this formidable task of becoming a neuro-surgeon.

Though congratulations and good wishes have come from all sides to Mrs. H. F. Brown (L. P. Humfrey), on her election as Mayor of Chester, none are more hearty and sincere than those which the Queen's School Old Girls offer. They are proud to remember that she is one of themselves, and they take this opportunity of expressing their pride in her career of public service, and especially, their appreciation of all she has done for her old school.

Eleanor Davies-Jones is congratulated on her appointment as House Surgeon at the Birmingham General Hospital.

Olga Smith is also to be congratulated on having obtained, at Bedford College, the three years' course diploma of the National Froebel Union. She has been appointed Kindergarten mistress at S. Brandon's Clergy Daughters' School, Bristol.

It was a great joy to find a picture by Phyllis (Dodd) Bliss, not only hung "on the line" in the Royal Academy, but also reproduced in the "Times". The picture is entitled "Prudence on Pegasus", and will be seen at the Autumn Exhibition at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool.

The Hon. Secretary of the London Branch sends the following Report:—The Annual Meeting and Tea was held on Saturday, 11th March, 1939, at the V.A.D. Ladies' Club, Cavendish Square, W.1. Miss Nedham and Miss Day were both kind enough to come up from Chester for the occasion, and two other former members of the staff, Miss Pryce Browne and Miss Simpson were also present. Greetings telegrams were received from the Queen's School Staff and from Dorothy (Stewart) Kitson, and Eleanor Davies-Jones and Miss Nedham reported Miss Clay's regret at being unable to come, through ill-health. Twenty-five members were present in all, including several new members of the Branch who had joined as the result of a circular sent to those Old Girls who sent in particulars about themselves to the Jubilee Number of "Have Mynde". An unexpected recruit was obtained at the meeting in the shape of Violet Fulton, an Old Girl (now living in Weymouth) who happened to be a member of the V.A.D. Club and to see Miss Day's name in the members' book.

After an excellent tea and plenty of conversation, an informal business meeting was conducted by Miss Nedham and the new Committee was elected for the coming year—consisting of the following:—Peggy Gray, Ruby James, Elizabeth Murdock, Marjorie Sudds and Irene Naylor (Hon. Secretary-Treasurer).

It was decided to hold the next meeting again on the second Saturday in March, and at the V.A.D. Ladies' Club if possible. The Secretary-Treasurer reported at the end of the meeting that there was a balance in hand of £3 11s. 6d.

If there are any Old Girls living in or near London who have not already joined the London Branch and would like to do so, they are invited to send their names, together with the annual subscription of a shilling, to Irene Naylor, at 21, Bath Road, Bedford Park, W.4. Any Old Girls who happen to be in London on the second Saturday in March will also be welcome at the meeting and tea, provided they send in their names beforehand if tea is required.
